New Members Tapped At Dance

Fourteen new members were tapped by the Sewanee chapter of Blue Key, national honorary service fraternity, in a ceremony held as a part of the University's Thanksgiving dance Saturday evening, November 29.

Red roses were presented to each new member's date by Miss Mira Miller of Atlanta, Georgia, escorted by Blue Key President Tito Hill of Laredo, Texas.

Chaplain Talks To AF Classes

Captain W. A. Boardman, Air Force Chaplain, spoke to each of the AF ROTC classes last Monday on the overall function of Air Force Chaplains, with special reference to lecturing to personnel on matters pertaining to morals and character.

This program was in accordance with a new AF ROTC regulation which requires Air Force Chaplains to be responsible for the moral education of the personnel in AF ROTC units.

Othel Boardman, who graduated from the University and completed part of his theological training at Lake's, has been on leave at Sewanee for the past month and will leave for the West Coast within the next few days to embark for Korea. During his absence, his wife and two children will remain at home, Xenadon, on the University dome.

Dick Miller and Mrs. Anne Turlington rehearse a scene from the forthcoming Purple Masque play "Twelfth Night."

Dramatists Have Hectic Week

Twelfth Night Readied For December 11 Opening

Purple Masque has spent a hectic week completing costuming and synchronizing the actions of the players in preparation for the opening of Twelfth Night on December 11. Misses Ruth Hale and Catherine Smith have devoted much time to the fittings of the elaborate costumes.

Dick Miller, Leyton Zimmer, Chester Boynton, Charles Mandes, and Mrs. Davis Carter have shown exceptional talent in interpreting their roles thus far, according to Al Nelius, director. Dick Miller, in playing the difficult role of Feste, the clown, must not only speak and sing; but he must also accompany himself on the lute (lute). This role is the longest in the play, and it is considered to be one of the most difficult.

Mrs. Carter plays Maria, the maid, portrayed by Mrs. Davis Carter, adds a definite touch of levity to the plot, while Zimmer's previous professional experience serves him well in his interpretation of Toby Belch. Chester Boynton's portrayal of Agorcheek, the fop, is magnificent, according to the director.

The production itself will feature elaborate costumes and incidental music traditional to Shakespearean productions. Mrs. C. A. Sanborn is acting as dramatic consultant and is assisting Mr. Nelius in the interpretation of the roles.

Mr. Nelius has stated, "Judging from rehearsals, Twelfth Night should rank as one of the outstanding productions of Purple Masque."

Dr. McCrady said in regard to community support, "I'm very hopeful that Purple Masque will receive support from students and surrounding communities in its undertakings." The possibilities of having a summer stock season at Sewanee were discussed with Dr. McCrady; and he stated that if local area support is sufficient, summer stock at Sewanee could become a reality.

Profs To Give Chapel Talks

A series of ten-minute talks by faculty members will be given as a part of the regular chapel services next week.

On Monday, December 8, the Rev. Mr. Howard A. Johnson, associate professor of theology in the School of Theology, will speak on "The Mysteries of Origin and Destiny." The following day Dr. H. Malcolm Owen, professor of biology, will discuss the question "What is an individual?"

Thursday, Dr. R. S. Lancaster, assistant professor of political science, will speak on the topic "Religion versus the Chicago Ethical Society." Mr. Tudor S. Long, professor of English literature, will complete the series Friday with a talk entitled "In Hours of Insight Willed." The services will be shortened to allow time for the talks.

The series is sponsored by Blue Key. The idea originated with a group composed of Tommy Williams, Bill Austin, Cliff Davis, David Jones, Bertram Wyatt-Brown, Ted Bierhaus, Gene Baker, Alan Helz, Peter Horn, Murray Voth, and Dr. Wilmer.

If the talks are considered successful a series of discussions with similar emphasis may be planned for next spring, to be held in the fraternity houses. Also being considered for the future is the use of student lay readers in the noon services.

11 Seniors To Appear In "Who's Who"

Outstanding Students Honored In National Publication

The selections were made by the Executive Committee of the Order of Gownsmen on the basis of leadership and scholarship.

Bill Austin, PDT from Bainbridge, Florida, has taken a full share in Sewanee athletics, putting in three years on both the football and track squads. He has also served as chairman of the Activities Committee and member of the Executive Committee and the "S" Club. In the publications field, he has worked on both the Cap and Gown and the Mountain Goat, as well as serving the Purple as Feature Editor this year. He is also a member of Sopherim and the Music Club.

Bob Boylston, SN from Sarasota, Florida, has served as President of the Order of Gownsmen and treasurer and president of his fraternity. A member of Pan-Hellenic Council and Green Ribbon, he has also worked with the Cap and Gown staff, Purple Masque, and the Acolytes' Guild.

George Chumbley is the president of BTP and a member of Pan-Hellenic Council and the Executive Committee of the Order of Gownsmen. Chumbley is from Manchester, Tennessee.

Tito Hill is a PGD from Laredo, Texas, and the president of Blue Key Honorary fraternity. Also a member of ODK, Pi Kappa Delta, and Green Ribbon, he is now the president of the Debate Council and a proctor. Having lettered in track, he is a member of the "S" Club. He has served as president of his fraternity, and is a cadet major in the ROTC unit.

Bob Jewell, senior from Sewanee, has been a member of Pan-Hellenic, Student Activities Committee Executive Committee, SVED, University Choir, and the Music Club. He has been vice-president of the Order of Gownsmen and both president and vice-president of the Independent men's organization.

3 Alumni Hurt In Korean War

Three Sewanee alumni, Frank L. Brown, '51, James W. Gentry, '50, and Ralph Reed, '51, have been wounded in Korea fighting in recent months.

Brown had been overseas for fifteen months with a national guard unit and in Korea for six months when he was hit by mortar fire while building bunkers in front of the lines. He was almost ready for rotation home when wounded June 18.

Late in August he was flown to Brooke Army Hospital at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. He lost a leg and suffered other severe wounds, but will be out of the hospital by spring.

Gentry, a marine corps officer, was wounded on July 13 while serving as a machine gun platoon leader, leading a patrol through a mine field. He had just graduated from a patrol leadership school held in a Korean reserve area and had been in combat about three weeks. His injuries included a broken arm and a broken leg. He was returned to the naval hospital at Oakland, California, for treatment.

Reed, also a marine officer, suffered injuries in the abdomen and right leg and was evacuated to a hospital ship.

Avent Gives Resignation

Comptroller Quits On Doctor's Advice

A resignation from University Comptroller James M. Avent, who has been suffering from poor health for several months, was accepted last week by the Vice-Chancellor. The resignation, which becomes effective December 31, 1952, was submitted in compliance with advice from Mr. Avent's physician.

A retired executive of the Standard Vacuum Oil Company, Mr. Avent was appointed university comptroller on May 1, 1949, by Acting Vice-Chancellor Henry M. Gass. During the 20 years that he was employed by Standard, he served in the marketing department of the company's China division.

Born in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, on November 21, 1885, Mr. Avent was the son of Frank and Mayna Avent. After graduating from Montgomery Bell Academy in 1915, he entered the University of the South, although his father had attended Vanderbilt and Cumberland universities. While at Sewanee he was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity and the varsity football and baseball teams.

Commissioned Lieutenant
In 1917, after attending Sewanee for two years, Mr. Avent entered the U. S. Army and was assigned to the First Officer Training Corps at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant, then assigned to the 110th Field Artillery, 31st Division, as a first lieutenant.

After serving 23 months in the Army, Mr. Avent began his work with Standard Vacuum Oil Company. On August 14, 1929, he married Jeanette Nelson of DeKalb, Illinois. They now have three children, Jacqueline, 22, Mayna Rose, 20, and Jimmy, 18. The latter is a freshman in the University. Mr. Avent and his family will continue to live at their home in Sewanee. A successor to the comptroller position has not yet been selected.

Lancaster Addresses Civic Club Meeting

Professor of political science Robert Lancaster gave a talk at the November meeting of the Sewanee Civic Association on the proposed changes in the Tennessee State Constitution that will be considered at the next meeting of the Constitutional Convention in April 1953.

At the meeting it was also suggested that the Highway 64 truck route be moved to a course paralleling the railroad tracks, to keep the heavy vehicles from coming through the main part of the campus.

It was further proposed that Sewanee, the largest unincorporated unit in the state, be incorporated. This suggestion is subject to the approval of the University.

Traditional Dishonesty

1 If a Sewanee student bragged about his success at cheating on exams or picking up girls, he would be uttering famous last words. If he attended a German Club dance without paying, however, he would be following a time-honored Arcadian custom. A small crowd leaves the gym during intermission at the dances; a mob surges back in when the music starts again. Few, if any, additional tickets are collected.

As long as gate crashing is regarded as a clever, boyish prank, the cost of the dances will continue to be divided among those who buy tickets rather than among those who attend.

The Purple suggests that the Honor Council should remove the glamorous trimmings from this form of dishonesty. It should be as infrequent—and as severely punished—as any other breach of the Honor Code.

2 German Club officers would be wise to continue investigating the possibility of staging dances in the Gailor Hall dining room. The new building is more accessible to students without cars, the Gailor public address system would make announcements and the dining-time floor shows audible, and the dining room could be decorated more easily and with less expense.

The German Club must do more, however, than seek official permission to use the building. According to Mr. Fred Nabors, twelve men would have to work seven hours early Sunday morning before Gailor could be reconverted from dance hall to dining hall. Floors would have to be mopped, tables rearranged, and places set.

Because the regular Gailor serving staff could not possibly perform on a Saturday night, the German Club will have to find a crew that can do the job. The money which would be saved on decorating the building would pay for such a group of workers—if twelve people who will work from 1 a.m. to 8 a.m. can be found. The German Club has a problem to solve. . . . JR

A Truck-Stop Named Ennuui

While the fraternity orchestra played the "Vorsouvirana" and several of the boys tried to sing with voices that couldn't have carried three in burly bags, I stared across the whirling couples at the fabulous Euphrosyne Culpepper. Although I was a guest at the party, and Euphrosyne had originally been someone's date, I had to stare at her. This was the most important girl at the Thanksgiving festivities . . . this was the elegant, beautiful, and demurely socially superior girl who came from a truck-stop named Ennuui, South Carolina.

I had waited half the evening, and still I hadn't met her and I didn't know who to go about it. Then as if deus ex machina had descended on the dance floor, a voice as gentle as the winds in the southern pines were heard: "Air, Rally, I must have air!"

Euphrosyne. I picked up the nearest sofa and broke out a window.

And then she was thanking me . . . it was all like a dream. "What's yore name sugah?" she was saying in an autumn-smoked filled voice. "I'll declare, yore the mos gallant gentleman ah ever met!" Then she was dancing, she was singing and smiling, she was carrying Euphrosyne. I picked up the nearest sofa and broke out with big ox eyes.

"I'm always swooning," she said. "I remember I swooned at a ball at our plantation, Beau Caucegmar, and people talked about it for days. Even though it created a scene, they finally forgot about it!"

Euphrosyne danced with a bottle of champagne in her hand. She was the most sophisticated girl I had ever met. At the end of every dance she would say: "Yawl must have another drink for savin' my life." I soon lost track of the dances.

Later I remember we sat down because she had said she was feeling so delicate, and I remember a dulcet voice saying: "Air, I must have air!" Lastly, I seem to remember the tinkling glass from another breaking window.

The next morning when I awoke on the sofa I found my wallet lying empty beside me and there was a piece of yellowed paper, smelling faintly of jasmine, pinned to it. It said: "Sugah, yawl have saved my life twice tonight . . . this last time by lending me money to get back to Beau Caucegmar."

I sighed with satisfaction. Euphrosyne was a real old impoverished southern belle, and anyway it's a lot further from Sewanee to Ennuui, South Carolina, than it is to Winchester.

Of Matrons And Pajamas

EDITOR
THE SEWANEAN PURPLE
DEAR JIM:

I write this letter to you because I would like to see and hear the opinions of both the faculty members and the students on the idea of allowing those who reside in Gailor to eat their Sunday morning meal properly dressed in pajamas, bathrobes, and slippers. The idea does not seem absurd, inelegant, or impractical to me or to the great majority of the students, living in or out of Gailor, to whom I have spoken.

For the first time we have a situation that would allow such a plan to work smoothly. There are no guests lodging at Gailor as in the situation at Tuckaway. So far as I can see no great harm would be done to the coat and tie rule if it were amended to allow this one exception. Of course each diner would have to come decently clad or else be refused admittance to the dining hall by any member of the Order of Gossweins.

Nothing could be more practical than such an idea. The time between breakfast and

On Entering Mail-Boxes

Being thin has its advantages. I suppose, and the most prominent of them is the fact that one can climb into that empty postbox to see just what the heck those postal clerks have stuck at the far end of the box. And while fighting a head-wind the other morning, I realized that man—especially one under fifty pounds—might someday quite by accident defy the laws of gravity. Fortunately I was saved from the test of this by the fact that I had had some good Sewanee coffee for breakfast, for the very weight of it would keep a plane on the ground (now I know why the auditorium has not blown over).

I thought the strong winds might account perhaps for the rapid turn-over in the student body. It certainly would explain why so many students keep saying they don't belong here; they actually don't. They were at Vanderbilt and got caught in a sudden gust.

The most troublesome part about being thin chapel could be spent in the sack by the fortunate few. As it is, the student has three choices: sleep till 10:30, get up and get dressed, in time for a Gailor breakfast, or get a Union breakfast before Chapel after sleeping till 9:30—a luxury that bites into the pocketbook deeply during these inflationary times.

Many students choose the forty winks instead of food instead of the sermon. If my idea were adopted, we who are lucky enough to reside in Gailor would also be lucky enough "to have our cake and eat it too," which is indeed rare in these days and times.

I am afraid, however, that there are too many people who do not like to see the privileged Upperclass Capitalists living in the lap of luxury for my little idea to bloom into realization. I predict that it will be crushed by those few who are so prudish about tradition that they just can't pass up an opportunity to nip Revolution in the bud every time it rears its ugly head.

I sincerely hope that my prediction is bad. Sincerely yours,

BILL BRANTLEY

Posterity—if there is any—will be amazed to learn that the atom bomb was developed in Tennessee, and this at a time when the State even banned the teaching of the Darwinian theory of evolution. In explanation, and in our defense, we can point out that it was not developed by Tennesseans.

O (last-born and loveliest vision for all Olympus) faded hierarchy! A young lady we once knew took her Master's degree in Psychology at a large Eastern university. Twenty years later she returned to her Alma Mater, only to find that all the textbooks had been changed. Like a rag pulled from under her feet, her education was gone. . . . As well as a Ph.D., a Ph.D., a Ph.D., a Ph.D., O that Aristotle had written a Psychics!

What is needed after the New Deal is another kind of Laokoon, a work dealing not with aesthetics but with confusion in other fields. Observing the mélange des genres, Lesauing tried to clarify and point out the differences between poetry and the plastic arts. The confusion to which he objected is no longer confined to aesthetics alone. Today we must learn to differentiate between the realms of politics and economics, between theology and sociology, between the objectives of religion and of education.

An idealist is one who thinks that the Great Smokies were not beautiful before the Declaration of Independence.

He was not quite ten, not old enough to play on the team, but old enough to envy and admire the players, old enough to worship heroes—and hence to like the game. With his classmates he went for the first time to watch his team play against a rival school. At home that night, wondering, troubled in spirit, he bravely explained to his mother: "The boys on the other team don't play fair."

Atheism And Septuplets

(The following space is devoted this week to the presentation of a wide assortment of very interesting facts, statistics, and announcements compiled for the benefit of Purple readers who like to keep abreast of the latest developments. Any references to the University of the South or anyone connected with it are all in your mind.)

In a recent student opinion poll taken by members of the Purple staff for the purpose of determining exactly how many students had opinions, 22 percent answered yes, 14 percent answered no, and the rest were undecided. This is an improvement of 128 percent over last Saturday night.

Did you know that there are only 323 more shopping days until Christmas are left?

Shortly after last week's announcement of the selection of the All-Christian football team (which included four Sewanee players), Dr. C. E. Heafner, of Jacksonville, Fla., revealed the starting lineup of the '73rd All-Atheist football team. Selections for the atheist eleven were based on how few chapel slips each player had accumulated. The team plays well in the Bible Bowl next Judgment Day.

A report came out of South America last week that a 32-year-old woman had given birth to septuplets. This means she had seven kids at one throw. When reporters reached the proud mother for a statement, she commented, "It's easier with dice."

The following announcement is announced upon the request of a wide assortment of RSPV PDQ BG (RFP). ## Indian Relics, Bones Found In Sewanee Cave

A cache of Indian pottery, arrowheads, and human and animal bones was discovered in a cave at the edge of the domain by Forestry Professor Charles E. Cheston and four students, during a field trip November 21.

The discovery occurred when Professor Cheston made a shallow excavation to check some root structures in the cave, which is located near Holly Spring and Lost Cove Caves. Finding a piece of rudely decorated clay pottery, he began to make more extensive excavations.

The small cave, which is approximately 40 feet wide and 38 feet deep, was apparently used by Indians as a hunting headquarters. Because the room has a rock shelf at the rear which would provide a warm sleeping area, the room is adapted for comfortable winter living.

Relics 160 years old. Although Sewanee's scientists have yet made a guess about the age of the relics, it is assumed that they are at least 160 years old. If they had been deposited later than 1790, they would have included remains of the "European freights" which the Tennessee Indians began to use at the end of the eighteenth century. Indians lived in the Sewanee area as late as 1830.

Professor Cheston plans to sift approximately one hundred tons of loose dirt from the cave floor during the next few months. As items are uncovered they will be labeled in regard to the area and depth at which they were found, then taken to the Science Building to be studied by the University's biologists. Mr. Cheston has already included areas in the cave through which visitors must not walk.

Preliminary siftings have already unearthed the jawbone of a deer and several pieces of clay pottery. The pottery, which has the imprint of a basket weave on its outer surface, was apparently baked by the "basket method".

The cave is regularly visited by the

Outing Club Elects Officers

Election of officers for the coming year was the chief item of business at the second organizational meeting of the Sewanee Outing Club, held last Monday night. Leaders of the group for the coming year will be Charlie Tomlinson, president; Allen Farmer, vice-president; and Stan Jenkins, secretary-treasurer.

Other items on the agenda at the meeting were the adoption of a preliminary constitution, and the planning of two hiking trips this weekend.

Membership in the society is open to any resident of the Sewanee area. It is expected, however, that most of the interest will come from the student body. The primary objective of the club, according to its organizers, is "to have a good time," and trips will be scheduled in hiking, camping, caving, rock climbing, hunting, fishing and other outdoor activities in which there is an expressed interest.

A hiking and caving trip to Lost Cove Cave has been planned for next Saturday afternoon by the group. Transportation will be furnished to and from the saddle on the Sherwood road, and club members will leave Science Hall at one-fifteen and return in time for supper Saturday. An alternate trip has also been set for members interested in working on the pavilion below the Cross.

All-Stars Beat Champion Phis

Scoring a touchdown on the last play of the game, the Intramural All-Stars defeated the Phi Delta Theta intramural champs 13-7 in the annual Blue Key All-Star game, November 25.

The winning touchdown was scored when tailback Johnny Boulit flipped a thirty yard pass to end Ed Sharp, who was standing in the end zone. Up to this point the game was extremely close, with neither team being able to do much against the terrific wind. With the passing of both teams off, the game developed into a defensive battle.

The Phis opened the scoring in the first quarter on a spot pass from Corbin to Fletcher after a 40-yard drive to the All-Star two yard line. Corbin passed to Terry for the extra point, and that was all the scoring the Phis were to do. The All-Stars came back in the second quarter when Butehorn intercepted a pass on the Phi twenty and scored easily. The extra point attempt was good, and the half ended in a deadlock, 7-7.

The second half was entirely defensive, each team merely threatening offensively. The defensive play of halfback Browning was especially noteworthy, because he intercepted three passes at crucial moments, two in the All-Star end zone.

Pic Of Flicks

By Marvin Mounts

Wednesday, December 3: A Millionaire for Christy, starring Fred MacMurray and Eleanor Parker. An entertaining flick that casts MacMurray as an elusive male who is being chased by Miss Parker. It is not an exceptional show, but worth the time and money.

Adventures of Captain Fabien with Errol Flynn and Agnes Moorehead is an unbridled melodrama of the most archaic type. The offering doesn't have a redeeming quality.

Thursday and Friday, December 4 and 5: The Wild Heart starring Jennifer Jones and David Farrar. A good plot, fine acting, and a superb job of Technicolor photography combine to make this one a "must". Its one minor defect is that the characterization of the heroine is not developed sufficiently. It concerns an English girl brought up in primitive surroundings who errs by leaving her clergyman husband briefly for another man.

Owl Show: Annie Get Your Gun with Betty Hutton and Howard Keel is one of the most lushly mounted (and filmed) of 1950 and makes for a pleasant time killer.

Saturday and Monday, December 6 and 8: Prisoner of Zenda with Stewart Granger and Deborah Kerr. This one is a good adventure flick of the escapist variety and is recommended as such. It is the story of a stalwart Englishman and his double, a weakling king in a mythical kingdom.

Sunday and Tuesday, December 7 and 9: The Sniper, starring Adolphe Menjou and Arthur Franz, bears the Stanley Kramer mark of a polished production and is definitely worthwhile. It is a kind of a psychological documentary, and the action is swift and dramatic in tracing the capture of a crazed woman-hater.

THEY SATISFY AND HOW!

"I always smoked Chesterfields in college just like my friends" says New York secretary, Elizabeth Lydon, "and here in New York it seems like almost everyone smokes them."

Elizabeth Lydon DUKE '51

AND NOW—CHESTERFIELD FIRST TO GIVE YOU SCIENTIFIC FACTS IN SUPPORT OF SMOKING

A responsible consulting organization reports a study by a competent medical specialist and staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfields. For six months a group of men and women smoked only Chesterfield—10 to 40 a day—their normal amount. 45 percent of the group have smoked Chesterfields from one to thirty years for an average of ten years each.

At the beginning and end of the six-months, each smoker was given a thorough examination including X-rays, and covering the sinuses, nose, ears and throat. After these examinations, the medical specialist stated . . .

"It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

Remember this report and buy Chesterfields . . . regular or king-size.
