Living Endowment Campaign To Be Launched In February

Vice-Chancellor Will Be General Chairman $75,000 Needed Annually To Meet Deficit

According to plans presented by the Vice-Chancellor at the annual meeting of the Associated Alumni in June, 1941, and again in June, 1942, a campaign for a Living Endowment for the University is scheduled to begin on February 9, 1943. These plans were endorsed by the association at both meetings and the Vice-Chancellor was authorized to proceed with them.

The goal of the campaign is $75,000.00 annually, needed for operating expenses because of lack of adequate permanent endowment. The sum of $50,000.00 will be sought from alumni and friends of Sewanee, who will be asked to sign statements of willingness and desire to contribute annually to the University as long as they are able to do so, or, if they prefer, for a period of five years. The remainder, $25,000.00, is to be sought from the dioceses and parishes of the Episcopal Church which own the University. Commitments amounting to $22,950.00 as a continuing annual obligation have already been made by the Sewanee dioceses.

The procedure in this campaign is to be the same as that of the campaign for the Sustaining Fund in 1939. It will be an all-alumni enterprise. The Vice-Chancellor, an alumnus, will be the general chairman. The Alumni Office, through its records and files, will provide the information necessary for the organization of the work. Alumni throughout the country will be called upon to serve as local chairmen and to do the work of solicitation.

Alumni will make their contributions direct to the Alumni Fund, which will be that part of the Living Endowment given by the former students of the University.

Although many Sustaining Fund subscriptions run through 1943, there will be no conflict with the new campaign, as all Sustaining Fund contributions for 1943 will count as the first contributions to the Living Endowment.

The Vice-Chancellor is now laying his plans for the campaign and pre-

Rt. Rev. WILLIAM MERCER GREEN, D.D.

Bishop of Mississippi Dies of Heart Attack

The Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, D.D., '99, Bishop of Mississippi, died suddenly in Columbus, Mississippi, on November 12. In his death Sewanee loses a distinguished alumnus and a faithful friend and supporter.

Born in Greenville, Mississippi, the son of the Rev. Duncan Cameron Green, Bishop Green received his early education in the schools of that city and because of intimate associations came to Sewanee in 1891 for his further education. His grandfather, the Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, first Bishop of Mississippi, had moved to Sewanee in 1867 and built the home, now standing, known as Kendall Hall, for many years presided over by his daughter, Miss Lily Green, and home to many generations of Sewanee students. The elder Bishop Green was the fourth Chancellor of the University, serving from 1867 until his death in 1887.

Gen. Patch Guest Speaker At Opening Service

In this fateful year of 1942-1943, when all the world is at war, alumni everywhere are doubtless wondering "How go things on the old Mountain?" The News is glad to report not only that the University has entered its seventy-fifth session with no disastrous loss in enrollment, but that, in spite of many difficulties, the University opened on September 23 under very favorable auspices.

Statistics show that in the College there are 264 students, and in the Seminary, 49. Deducting those counted twice, we have a total of 309 as compared with 360 at this date last year. A considerable portion of this loss is due to the falling off in the entering class which numbers this year 97, as compared with 127 last year. An overflowing enrollment of 230 cadets at the Academy brings the student population of the Mountain to the very respectable total of 539.

Even with the smaller enrollment, the residential halls are full to the limit. Ambler Hall, occupied last year by the students of the college, accommodates an overflow of 20 cadets from Quintard. Van Ness has been renovated and made the very attractive home of the overflow from the Seminary and the college and the ten students enlisted in the CPT program.

A large proportion of the students in the College is or will be in the enlisted reserves. Old students to the number of 46 are enlisted in the Naval programs V-1, V-5, and V-7; in the Army there are 41; and in the Marines, 13. In November officials from the various services visited Sewanee for the purpose of enlisting freshmen and others desirous of entering the various programs.

Faculty changes, as is to be expected, are numerous. Five members who leave the University this year bring to the number of eight those who have left to enter the Armed Forces. Newcomers who fill their places will be introduced to the alumni elsewhere in these columns.

The keynote of the year was struck by the Vice-Chancellor at the opening service of the University when in his

THE ALUMNI AND THE LIVING ENDOWMENT

In the campaign for the Living Endowment that lies before us, the details of which are set forth elsewhere in these columns, alumni are called upon once more to give to Sewanee and to work for Sewanee. If some are faint hearted in the matter of giving, they might take a lesson from one of Sewanee's most distinguished and beloved alumni whose response to the Sustaining Fund was, out of his little, ten dollars a month to Sewanee as long as he lives. His spirit is a challenge to all who call themselves Sewanee alumni.

Or they might take a lesson from a very young alumnus of the Class of '42 who, having just read the last issue of the ALUMNI NEWS, wrote as follows, from the U.S.N.R. Midshipmen's School at Northwestern in Chicago:

"It sure was a pleasure to read the NEWS. Although I was only at Sewanee for one year, I still call it my Alma Mater, and my interest is just as great as if I graduated there.

"In my enthusiasm I am sending $1.00 for the Alumni Fund. It doesn't seem like much, but it's my last dollar and considering the fact that we've only been paid once this month and only received $10.00 it seems pretty big to me right now."

If others are discouraged in the matter of work, they may be cheered with the realization that through the efforts of the alumni the Sustaining Fund was so signal a success. Lest we forget the fruits of that campaign, the Vice-Chancellor in his special message to the alumni, shortly to be mailed, writes as follows:

"The Sustaining Fund of The University of the South has been a fine program for the support of the University. The campaign to raise $500,000.00 for Sewanee was launched in the winter of 1939. The campaign reached its goal. The sum of $500,000.00 was raised, payable $100,000.00 a year for five years, to balance the budget each year without a cent of deficit and to pay the floating debt of $167,000.00 in notes to banks and to individuals. The budget has been balanced each year for the past four fiscal years, the entire floating debt of $167,000.00 has been liquidated, and necessary and important repairs and improvements have been effected."

An Open Letter to Sewanee Alumni in the Armed Forces

This is a message from no individual, from no one in authority, but from the heart of all Sewanee to each and every one of you, alumni of Sewanee, who have gone forth and are going forth to the far corners of the world to fight the battle for freedom; who, in a very real sense, therefore, are fighting Sewanee's fight; who are risking your lives for all that Sewanee represents, for liberal culture, for Christian manhood, for the peace and beauty of this towered city.

Sewanee would have you know that we who are left behind are not unmindful of you. In our concern for all that comes to you, in our solicitude for your safety, we are paying a heavy price—a price made heavier than you realize by the very intimacy of those years spent together here on this Mountain, in the classroom, in the fraternity houses, in our homes, and in the pleasant comradeship of our daily lives. We eagerly exchange all news that comes to us and pass it on to the Purple and to the Alumni News that it may go out to the wider Sewanee public.

Sewanee would have you know that as you are in our thoughts, so are you in our prayers. Each day in Chapel the prayer arises for all of you everywhere—"our soldiers, our sailors, and our airmen." Sewanee's service flag—your flag—hangs in All Saints' Chapel as a companion to the service flag of World War I which you remember. Already the stars on that flag indicate that you number five hundred. The figure is now approaching six hundred and is changing constantly as we learn of men who have entered or are entering the service. There are also six gold stars on that flag—a constant reminder that Sewanee men have already made the great sacrifice.

Finally, Sewanee would have you know that we are proud of you, Sewanee alumni, as you rise like men to meet the mighty challenge of your generation; that we have every confidence in your power to carry this war to victorious conclusion; and that we await with eager hearts the day when you will come back home with courage as strong to win the great victory of peace as you have won the great victory of war.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

At its fall meeting, the Board of Regents passed resolutions paying high tribute to Dr. and Mrs. Guerry and ordered the resolutions, engrossed and framed, to be presented to them with due ceremony as an expression of the confidence, esteem, and affection of the executive board of the University. In the conviction that the sentiments expressed in these resolutions should be made known to the alumni and that they will strike an answering chord in the hearts of all who love Sewanee and labor for Sewanee's greater good, the Board of Regents has requested that we transmit them to the alumni through these columns.

"WE, THE MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH, assembled in regular session, having noted the conditions prevailing at the University with respect to student enrollment, the high quality of our faculty and of our student personnel, the morale of the student body in these disturbed times, the spiritual tone of the institution, the continued improvement of the physical condition of the plant and of the domain, and the steady betterment of the financial status of the University, desire to record our profound gratitude and appreciation to the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Alexander Guerry, for the love and leadership and consecration which he constantly expresses in the discharge of his duties as Vice-Chancellor.

"We are grateful to Almighty God that He has raised up a leader for this Christian University whose rare gifts and singular ability and Christian discipleship equip him so supremely to direct the destiny of The University of the South through the critical days which are now upon us. He came to his Alma Mater in her time of crisis four years ago, and has led us into a new day of stability and solvency and permanence. In other hands all of these gains could disappear beneath the crisis now superimposed upon us by the war. We are exceptionally blessed in having in Dr. Guerry a Vice-Chancellor who can lead us in weathering this storm to the limit of human possibilities. We pray for him all strength and health and divine guidance in the heavy responsibilities and problems he is carrying on behalf of us all; and we, as Regents, pledge to him anew our support, our utmost efforts, and our complete devotion to The University of the South and its beloved Vice-Chancellor.

"We further desire to express our gratitude and affectionate admiration to Dr. Guerry's valiant co-worker, Mrs. Guerry, whose graciousness and unbounded hospitality and self-giving have contributed so much to the spirit and charm of the life of the University family and community. Sewanee is a better, more radiant place because of her and of the home which she adorns and which she shares without stint to the upbuilding of the University. May she and all who are near and dear to her be sustained and defended by the Father of us all through dark days and bright."

Mr. Crawford Johnson Dies

As we go to press, news is received of the death on December 9 of Mr. Crawford Toy Johnson of Birmingham, staunch friend and benefactor of Sewanee. Mr. Johnson has for many years contributed liberally to the support of the University and beautiful Johnson Hall is a monument to his and Mrs. Johnson's generosity. In death, he was not forgetful of Sewanee. By the terms of his will, the University receives $50,000.00.

Bishop Maxon's Twentieth Anniversary Observed

On Sunday, October 18, the Diocese of Tennessee united in observing the twentieth anniversary of the consecration to the episcopate of its honored Bishop, the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D.D. The central diocesan observance was held at St. Mary's Cathedral in Memphis. Similar observances throughout the diocese were marked by generous tributes paid to Bishop Maxon, by thanksgiving to God for the remarkable progress in the diocese during the past twenty years and by renewed consecration to the work of the Church in the years ahead.

All the Bishops of Tennessee, of whom Bishop Maxon is the fourth, have been intimately associated with Sewanee. Bishop Otey, along with Bishops Polk and Elliott, first conceived Sewanee and with them is revered as one of the founders of the University. After the Civil War, Bishop Quintard brought to realization the frustrated dream of the founders and became the actual founder and first Vice-Chancellor of the University. Bishop Gailor was in turn Chaplain, Vice-Chancellor, and Chancellor and for many years lived in our midst. Bishop Maxon, after years of service to the University, is now its Chancellor. Sewanee and Sewanee's alumni send greetings to the Chancellor and all good wishes that he may have health and strength to continue for many more years his valiant service to the University, the Diocese, and the Church.

Thomas Evans Host At Sewanee Luncheon

On October 15, at the Racquet Club in Philadelphia, Thomas Evans, '03, was host at the Sewanee luncheon, given in honor of the Rev. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, who was consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Pennsylvania on the following day. The occasion of the luncheon was the expected presence in Philadelphia of both the Chancellor and the Vice-Chancellor of the University for the consecration of Bishop Hart. Unhappily, Dr. Guerry was prevented from being present at the luncheon because of the fact that his plane was grounded in Washington on account of weather conditions. Bishop Maxon, however, officially represented the University and reports to the News that the luncheon was a particularly happy occasion. Present was a very distinguished array of Sewanee alumni and friends of the University. Their names follow:

Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D.D., Hon., Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, Hon., Rt. Rev. Hunter Wyatt-Brown, '05, Dr. Wm. E. Mikell, Hon., Rev. J. Cullen Ayer, D.D., Hon., Thomas Evans, '03, Phelan Beale, '02, Willis Ambler, '07, John Davidson, '30, Dr. Michael Bennett, Jr., '27, Dr. Samuel T. Adams, '38, Dr. William G. Crook, '37, Rev. Geo. E. Boswell, '16, Rev. Crosswell McBee, '00, Dr. Allen Evans, of the Philadelphia Divinity School, Dr. James E. Gowen, charge to the students of the University he adapted the stirring words of Winston Churchill spoken after Dunkirk: "Let us, therefore, address ourselves to our duty, so bear ourselves that, if Sewanee last for a thousand years, men will say that this was her finest hour."

After his charge to the students the Vice-Chancellor introduced as the speaker of the occasion Major General Joseph Patch, commanding officer of the 80th Division at Camp Forrest. General Patch spoke in much the same mood as the Vice-Chancellor, and reminded the assembled student body of the great privilege and the equally great responsibility of college men. He called on the students of the University and on college students throughout the country to consider themselves as now enlisted in the total war effort of the nation, to perform their daily tasks in that spirit and to devote every effort to preparing themselves, morally, mentally and physically, for military service whenever the call might come.

What the future holds for Sewanee in view of the law drafting eighteen and nineteen year old boys, none at this moment can tell. Alumni may rest assured that, under the vigorous leadership of the Vice-Chancellor, every effort consistent with the greater good of the country as a whole will be made by every agency to preserve the University. In the meantime, Sewanee addresses herself to the immediate task ahead to make the seventy-fifth session of the University a worthy one in every sense.

On the Mountain

Gen. George Allin New Superintendent of Academy

Brig. Gen. George R. Allin, United States Army, Retired, is the new Superintendent of the Sewanee Military Academy. The Academy, entering the period of perhaps its greatest usefulness and prosperity, is fortunate in having as its new head a man of General Allin's training and ability. Born in 1880, he is a graduate of the University of Iowa, of West Point, and of the Army War College. He served for four years on the faculty at West Point. In 1918 he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. His long and honorable career in the army, in which he held many important assignments in this country and overseas, was concluded by a four-year detail as Commanding Officer at the Fort Sill Artillery School, served just prior to his retirement in June, 1942.

With Mrs. Allin, General Allin arrived in Sewanee on November 1. They are living in the home of Mrs. Mary Sanborn, which has been leased as the superintendent's residence.

Civilian Pilot Training Program Expanded

On July 1, the Civilian Pilot Training program at Sewanee, as elsewhere, was adapted directly to the war effort by being changed to a full-time course of eight weeks. Those enrolled in the course are not as heretofore students of the University taking aviation, but special students under the Civil Aeronautics Administration which pays for board, lodging, transportation, and flight school tuition. The trainees are given a total of 240 hours of ground school and 35 to 40 hours of flight training in the eight-weeks' course.

During the summer, the facilities at the University Airport on Highway 64, between Cowan and Winchester, were greatly improved through a grant to the University of $3,500 from the Tennessee Bureau of Aeronautics.

The first group of five service and five glider pilots was graduated from the school on September 26. The second group was graduated on November 23. A third group of ten began training on December 14. The recruiting of all students in the first three groups was done by Professor Scott of the University faculty, Coordinator of the program. The recruits were drawn from territory assigned, adjacent to Sewanee.

Coincident with the arrival of the third group, a detachment of prospective Navy fliers, twenty strong, was sent by the Navy to join the school. These students are all in the V-5 naval aviation program. They will take the regular course of instruction at Sewanee, proceeding on graduation to one of the pre-flight training schools of the Navy.

Many Faculty Changes Because of the War

In this year of change, Sewanee with great regret bids farewell to four members of the faculty and one member of the administration who have entered service in the country's armed forces and at the same time welcomes five new additions to her faculty.

The departing ones have served Sewanee well, and their absence will be keenly felt at every turn. In naming them, the News expresses to them the gratitude of all Sewanee for their years of service in the University and the hope that they will shortly return to take their places in our midst: Freeman of the Department of French, Dugan of the Department of Politics, Govan of the Department of History, Griswold of the Departments of Greek and Bible, and Vaughan of the administration.

With their departure, new faces appear on the Sewanee scene. Sewanee welcomes these additions to her faculty and takes pleasure in introducing them to the Sewanee public.

Mr. Andrew Nelson Lytle takes up duties as acting Assistant Professor of History. A native Tennessean, Mr. Lytle is a graduate of the Sewanee Military Academy, a graduate of Vanderbilt University, and a graduate student in the Department of Dramatics at Yale. He taught history previously at Southwestern in Memphis. As author he is well known for his biography of Bedford Forrest, for an essay in the much discussed volume of the Agrarians, "I Take My Stand," and for works of fiction, "The Long Night" and "At the Moon's End." Mr. Lytle is also the newly elected managing editor of the Sewanee Review.

Dr. Medford Evans is the new acting Assistant Professor of English. A Texan by birth, he took his B.A. degree at the University of Chattanooga in 1927 and his Ph.D. degree in English at Yale University in 1933. His previous teaching experience was at the University of Mississippi, at Texas A. & I., and at the University of Chattanooga.

Dr. R. W. B. Elliott, '94, is acting Assistant Professor of Politics. Dr. Elliott has from Sewanee the degrees of B.A. and M.A. and the honorary degree of D.C.L. awarded in 1933. He received the LL.B. degree from Columbia University in New York. After a long and successful career in the profession of law in New York City, during which time he served as Chancellor of the Diocese of New York, Dr. Elliott retired and came to Sewanee. Sewanee is fortunate in being able in this emergency to enjoy his very capable services in the Department of Politics.

Dr. Stratton Buck is the acting Assistant Professor of French. Born in Baltimore, he was educated in this country and abroad. He has the following degrees: A.B., Michigan, 1928; A.M., Columbia, 1929; Ph.D., Chicago, 1941. His previous teaching experience was at the University of Tennessee

Distinguished Service Medal Awarded Col. Alex Quintard

On Thursday, November 12, in a special ceremony held at the Sewanee Military Academy, the Distinguished Service Medal was awarded to Col. Alexander Shepherd Quintard, U.S.A., for distinguished service in the Philippines. Major General William Bryden, Commanding General of the Fourth Service Command, Service of Supply, specially detailed by the War Department, came from Atlanta to confer the decoration. In the absence of Colonel Quintard, the medal was received by his wife, Mrs. Alexander Quintard, who now resides in Sewanee. The citation which was read by General Bryden follows:

"Alexander S. Quintard, Colonel, Field Artillery, United States Army. For exceptionally meritorious service to the Government in a duty of great responsibility in the Philippine Islands, from December 8, 1941, to March 11, 1942. Assigned on the outbreak of hostilities to organize and command a provisional regiment of Field Artillery, later designated the 301st Field Artillery, Philippine Army, Colonel Quintard assembled a small cadre of officers and enlisted men. Upon receipt of the remainder of the personnel, comprised of Philippine Army reservists and volunteers, many without previous Field Artillery training, he hastily organized his command to man 155-millimeter guns obtained from the Coast Artillery and trained it in the limited time available. His ability and leadership were demonstrated by the efficient performance of this unit when employed in combat on the Bataan Peninsula less than three weeks after its organization was initiated."

Colonel Quintard, though not himself an alumnus of the University, attended the Academy from 1904 to 1907. He is by tradition very closely associated with Sewanee and has in recent years been a frequent visitor in our midst. His grandfather, the Rt. Rev. Charles Todd Quintard, was after the Civil War the actual founder and first Vice-Chancellor of the University. His father, Edward Augustus Quintard, was a graduate of the Class of 1882. Mrs. Quintard was before her marriage Miss Jean Jervey, daughter of Brig. Gen. J. P. Jervey, Professor of Mathematics in the University.

Colonel Quintard, a veteran of World War I, has had a long and distinguished career in the army. In command of the 301st Field Artillery throughout the Battle of Bataan, he is one of the heroes of that epic struggle whose fate is at present uncertain. He is known to have been alive and well two days before the surrender. Information recently secured to the effect that some American officers are prisoners of war held by the Japanese gives hope that he has survived and will some day return to family and friends.

Portrait of Bishop Mikell Unveiled in Library

On Sunday afternoon, November 1, the Sewanee public gathered in the Library to witness the unveiling of a portrait of the late Rt. Rev. Henry Judah Mikell, Bishop of the Diocese of Atlanta and Chancellor of the University. The portrait is the work of Dr. Edward McCrady, Professor of Biology in the University. It is the gift to the University of the Kappa Alpha fraternity in honor of Bishop Mikell, one time Knight Commander of the fraternity.

For the Kappa Alpha fraternity, Mr. Morse Kochtitzky, president of the Sewanee Chapter, made the speech of presentation. For the University the Vice-Chancellor received the portrait. Mr. Kochtitzky then introduced the guest speaker of the occasion, the Hon. Ellis Arnall, Governor-elect of the state of Georgia, a Sewanee graduate of the Class of 1928 and a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. In well-chosen words, Mr. Arnall paid fine tribute to Bishop Mikell, as Sewanee alumnus, as Churchman, as educator, and as fraternity man.

The portrait is a striking likeness of the Bishop seated, wearing his episcopal robes. Touches of color include the crimson suggestion of his Doctor of Divinity hood. Dominating the whole is the Bishop's fine face, the grave and almost ascetic serenity of which the artist has well portrayed. Sewanee is proud to possess this portrait, painted by one of her professors, of this distinguished son and to hang it with the portraits of other Sewanee notables in Sewanee's hall of fame.

where he was Assistant Professor of Romance Languages from 1938 to 1941. He spent the year 1937-38 at the University of Chicago where he was a fellow in the Department of Romance Languages.

Mr. Charles E. Cheston is the acting Professor of Forestry. A native of New Jersey, he holds the degrees of Bachelor of Science in Forestry from the New York State College of Forestry, 1933, and Master of Forestry from Yale University, 1940. His previous experience in forestry has been entirely practical. He has been nine years in the employ of the Federal Government and later of the State of New Jersey, as a professional forester.

Miss Alice Hodgson Married At All Saints' Chapel

At high noon on Wednesday, December 2, All Saints' Chapel was the scene of the wedding of Miss Alice Cheatham Hodgson to Captain Edward Frost Parker, United States Army Medical Corps, of Charleston, South Carolina, stationed at nearby Camp Forrest. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George B. Myers, of the faculty of the Theological School.

ATHLETIC PROGRAM IS ACCELERATED

The tempo of the University athletic program has been greatly accelerated to keep time with the war effort of our country and to develop as much as possible in the college years the physical well being of the students. No more does the privileged upper-classman lord it over the poor freshman as he goes through the process of taking Physical Ed. Participation in athletics is compulsory for all freshmen and sophomores and for all students who are members of the enlisted reserves. This elaborated program finds all but 30 students in the college engaged in some form of athletics—football, military drill, physical education, or intramural sports.

Physical Ed includes work in the gym and allows a hike as a substitute once a week. The hiking club flourishes and each Friday afternoon from 30 to 40 students seek out the beauty spots in the nearby area of the University. The intramural program, always keenly enjoyed and entered into, proceeds at an even faster pace than ever and brings into friendly but hectic competition a large proportion of the student body.

Interesting developments of the athletic program this year are military track and amateur football. An obstacle course, modelled after those now common at the pre-flight schools, parallels the 220 straight away and turns left running the width of the track oval. It is beset by numerous and devious body-racking and strength-testing obstacles which try the stamina of the novice and have already been the cause of casualties. All students enlisted in the navy programs are required to master this difficult course.

Football this year was an interesting venture. The ancient rivalry between the Hardees and Sewanees was revived and a squad of about 50 would-be sol-

Major MacKellar III Since Summer Session

Professor W. H. MacKellar of the Department of Public Speaking has been seriously ill since the close of the summer session. He made an effort to take up his duties at the opening of the fall session but after a few days he suffered a relapse. Since that time he has been confined to his bed first at his home in Sewanee and lately at the Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville.

"Major Mac," as he has been familiarly known to generations of students, is Sewanee's patriarch. Since his matriculation in 1883, his connection with the University has been almost uninterrupted. After receiving his M.A. degree in 1891, he served the Grammar School, later the Academy, at various times as Master, Headmaster, and Commandant. He was appointed Professor of Public Speaking in the University in 1917. He served the alumni for many years as the Organizing Secretary.

The News, speaking for all Sewanee, sends to the "grand old man of the Mountain" best wishes for a speedy recovery and an early return to his work.

diers, sailors, and marines entered seriously into the sport and fought tooth and nail for victory for their side, enthusiastically abetted by the student body who had been divided into two opposing rooting sections. The Sewanees and the Hardees fought it out in two closely contested games, one of which resulted in a 7 to 0 victory for the Sewanees and the other in a 0 to 0 tie. The season came to its climax in a game between a team picked from the two squads and the freshmen of Georgia Tech, a game which resulted in a smashing 7 to 0 victory for Sewanee's team.

paring literature which will shortly be mailed to alumni and friends of Sewanee. By way of a preview for the benefit of alumni, the News undertakes to present the high-lights of this forthcoming literature.

A Living Endowment, as a supplement to an inadequate general endowment, is explained as follows:

"A Living Endowment is the annual income from gifts for a college or university. The dependable revenue from contributions each year by alumni and friends to the support of an institution of higher learning is the institution's Living Endowment.

"A permanent endowment is the invested funds of a college or university for purposes of income, the interest or returns from which are expendable for operating costs.

"Sewanee needs a Living Endowment. Sewanee must have a dependable income each year from the gifts of friends and alumni. The University's endowment is and has always been totally inadequate. Sewanee cannot exist, therefore, without the contributions of a host of generous men and women."

The need for a Living Endowment is made clear by a review of the financial condition and prospects of the University.

"The cost of operation of the University is approximately $65,000.00 more than the income from endowment, student fees, and all other sources. To meet this excess of expense over revenue, the University must receive the sum of $65,000.00 in donations every year. It is not possible to reduce operating costs without the elimination of departments of the institution or drastic decrease in salaries. The latter would be almost as bad as the former for salaries and wages are too low now.

"There should be a sum of $10,000.00 in addition to the $65,000.00 to make up for the probable further loss of income due to the effect of the new draft law and to provide a small sum, if possible, for the development and strengthening of the University.

"Sewanee asks, therefore, for a Living Endowment of $75,000.00, beginning in 1943. Sewanee appeals to her alumni and friends for $50,000.00 for the Living Endowment and to the Church for $25,000.00. In other words the sum of $50,000.00 must come from individuals and the sum of $25,000.00 from the dioceses and the parishes in the dioceses that own The University of the South. The total of individual gifts and Church contributions will be the necessary $75,000.00.

"The annual contributions from parishes and dioceses have risen from $8,851.69 in 1938 to $19,165.61 in 1942. Since the Sewanee dioceses have made commitments to the amount of $22,950.00 as a continuing annual obligation, it is hoped that they will increase this sum to $25,000.00."

The Alumni Fund, so often explained in these columns, is once more carefully outlined in every detail and more particularly in its relationship to the Living Endowment.

"The Sewanee Alumni Fund is the fund created each year by the gifts of the Alumni of The University of the South. The annual contributions from Sewanee's former students are the Alumni Fund.

"The purpose of the Alumni Fund is the support of The University of the South and of the work of the Alumni Office. Each year sufficient funds are taken from the Alumni Fund to pay the expense of the office of the Associated Alumni, including salary of the organizing secretary and of the secretary of the Alumni Office, the keeping of the records and files, the general and special correspondence, the publishing of the ALUMNI NEWS, and other functions and activities. The balance of the Alumni Fund is turned over each year to The University of the South for its operating costs. The gift to the University is by far the larger portion of the Alumni Fund and this is as it should be, for an organization of alumni exists primarily as a means by which the alumni may aid their own alma mater.

"The gift of a Sewanee alumnus to the Alumni Fund carries with it membership in the Associated Alumni of The University of the South. There are no membership dues separate from the contribution to the Alumni Fund. A contribution of any amount entitles an alumnus to membership in the Associated Alumni. . . . The Alumni Fund will become the main part of Sewanee's Living Endowment. Every alumnus should contribute to the Alumni Fund and, therefore, to the Living Endowment. Every alumnus is asked, therefore, to sign a statement of desire or intent to give to the Alumni Fund and the Living Endowment either for an indefinite period, as long as he is able to do so, or for the next five years."

The difficulties that lie ahead are not overlooked, but great as are the difficulties, greater still is the victory to be won.

"Sewanee realizes that it is very difficult for people to give money to education or to any cause in these days. The new and higher taxes, the appeal of the Federal government to its citizens to buy War Bonds and War Savings Stamps, the rise in the cost of living, and the demands of a vast world conflict upon the entire nation make many men and women feel that they cannot afford to contribute to the support of colleges and universities.

"But colleges and universities must be maintained. In this hour of their need they must have aid. If the nation loses its institutions of higher learning, it will lose some of the most important values for which it is fighting and will surrender some of its most precious advantages and opportunities. If Sewanee fails to survive, the South and the nation will suffer a great calamity for Sewanee stands for those ideals in education and in life that are the very essence of democracy and the firm foundation of an enduring society.

"And so, as the people fight to win the war in the cause of justice and freedom in the world, they must fight to win the war completely by preserving those institutions that will forever keep and guard the great ideals, the realization of which has been the quest of the human race since the dawn of history. In this group stands The University of the South. And not for herself but for that which she represents and seeks to interpret and give to her sons, Sewanee asks that the generosity and abiding interest of friends and alumni will endow her with the resources and the strength to fulfill the high mission for which she was created."

Bishop of Mississippi Dies of Heart Attack

are, besides Bishop Green, his brother Duncan Cameron Green, '98, and his two sons, the Rev. William Mercer Green, Jr., '36, now a chaplain in the Army, and Duncan Cameron Green, '31 of Jackson, Mississippi.

Bishop Green spent eight years as a student in the University and received the degrees of Bachelor of Arts in 1896, Master of Arts in 1898, and Bachelor of Divinity in 1899. Later, on the occasion of his election to the episcopate he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. His priesthood was served largely in Mississippi. He was rector of Grace Church in Canton, St. Paul's Church, Meridian, and St. Andrew's Church, Jackson. He was elected Bishop Coadjutor of Mississippi in 1919 and became Bishop by succession in 1938 upon the retirement of Bishop Bratton.

As a student at Sewanee, he was very active in student affairs. He was a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. In the then keen rivalry between the Sewanee and the Hardee baseball clubs, he played for the Sewanee team, being its captain in 1898. He served the Purple and the Sewanee Literary Magazine in various capacities, he took active part in forensic activities, and was awarded the highest student honor, being elected Mountain proctor.

Bishop Green was a loyal alumnus of the University, generous in his support of Sewanee and ready always to take an active part in any enterprise for the advancement of the University he loved so well. With the exception of twelve years in his entire ministry, he sat on the Board of Trustees of the University. He spent a part of every year in his summer cottage at Sewanee and will be greatly missed by his many friends and admirers in this community.

About Sewanee Alumni

V. S. Lovell, A.T.O. Founder, Dies in Birmingham

William Storrow Lovell, '81, familiarly known to the older Sewanee alumni as "Tod," died on October 4 at his home in Birmingham, Alabama. For the past several years he has visited Sewanee during the summer months and has lived in the old Lovell residence across from the Sewanee Inn.

"Tod" Lovell entered the Grammar School in 1872. On graduation he entered V. M. I. where he spent one year, returning to Sewanee in 1877. While at V. M. I. he was initiated into the A.T.O. Fraternity. In his first year in the University he made history by founding, with some of his fellow students, the Omega Chapter of A.T.O., first fraternity at Sewanee.

Brothers of "Tod" Lovell who were students at Sewanee were John Quitman Lovell, '76, and Joseph Mansfield Lovell, '90. The Lovells were a Natchez, Mississippi, family. After the death of Col. W. S. Lovell, a veteran of the Civil War, Mrs. Lovell moved to Sewanee to live. She joined the long line of noble women who were so much a part of early Sewanee and her home was the home of many generations of Sewanee students.

Gen. Henry Jervey Dies At Home in Charleston

In the death on September 30 of Major General Henry Jervey, U.S.A., Retired, Sewanee lost one of her most distinguished alumni.

Son of Dr. Henry Jervey and Helen Louise Wesson Jervey, of Charleston, S. C., Henry Jervey entered the University in 1881 and was graduated in 1884 with the degree of C.E. He was a charter member of Tennessee Omega Chapter of the S.A.E. fraternity which was installed at Sewanee in the year 1883.

General Jervey's career as a soldier began in 1884 when he entered West Point, of which institution he was an honor graduate, receiving in 1888 the degree of B.S. There followed a long record of distinguished service in the Army which reached its climax in the last World War when he rose to the high post of Assistant Chief of Staff, United States Army, with rank of Major General in charge of operations. His special assignment, for which he was solely responsible, was the training of troops, transportation to port of departure, and transportation thence to Europe. For conspicuous and meritorious service in this connection, he was awarded by our government the Distinguished Service Medal. Other decorations received by General Jervey were Commander, Legion of Honor, (France); Grand Officer of the Order of Leopold (Belgium); Companion of the Bath (Britain); and Order of the Crown (Italy).

In 1930, Sewanee, in recognition of the outstanding achievement of her

JOE DALTON NOW BRIGADIER GENERAL

Joseph N. Dalton, '16, has recently been promoted to the rank of Brigadier General, United States Army, and has been appointed to the important post of assistant chief of staff for personnel in the division of Services of Supply of the War Department with headquarters in Washington, D. C.

General Dalton came to Sewanee in 1912, immediately upon graduation from V. M. I., to be Commandant of Cadets at the Sewanee Military Academy. He registered in the University in the same year and played football for a brief time until he was ruled ineligible because of his previous football record at V. M. I. Under his capable military leadership, the Academy advanced rapidly until it became one of the distinguished military schools in the country. At the outbreak of World War I, he entered the Army in which he has served with distinction ever since. His many friends at Sewanee and among the alumni generally rejoice to learn of this high reward for his long service in our country's Army.

distinguished son, conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. In 1922, he retired from active service and lived quietly in Charleston until his death. General Jervey's brother, Brigadier General James Postell Jervey has been since 1926 the honored and beloved Professor of Mathematics at Sewanee.

Robert Brinkley Snowden Dies in Memphis

Sewanee was recently saddened by the news of the death of a distinguished alumnus, Robert Brinkley Snowden, '88, of Memphis, Tennessee, on October 12. Mr. Snowden was the first of a long line of Snowdens to come to Sewanee, being a student in the University from 1884 to 1889, and one of the very early members of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. He was followed at Sewanee by his brother, J. Bayard Snowden, '03, by his sons, Thomas Dav Snowden, '23, Brinkley S. Snowden, '27, and Lt. Col. John B. Snowden, II, '28, and by his nephews, sons of J. Bayard Snowden above, J. Bayard Snowden Jr., '36, and Robert Snowden, '40.

Sewanee takes this opportunity of acknowledging its further debt to the Snowden family. The Chair of Forestry is a memorial to Mr. Snowden's mother, Mrs. Annie Overton Brinkley Snowden, having been endowed in 1928 by his brother, J. Bayard Snowden. The Snowden addition to the Hospital, a memorial to Mr. Snowden's father and mother, Robert Bogardus and Annie Overton Brinkley Snowden, was built and endowed in 1926 by his sister, Mrs. Mary Overton Snowden Treadwell. Ellis Arnall Elected Governor of Georgia

On September 9, the date of the Democratic Primary in the State of Georgia, a Sewanee alumnus, Ellis G. Arnall, '28, stood in the national political spotlight. For months the eyes of the nation had watched him as he waged, in the cause of "the reputation and honor of his state" his spectacular fight against one of the most notorious and seemingly most strongly entrenched demagogues in this country. His opponent was the redoubtable Gene Talmadge who, at the height of his power, had made himself vulnerable. In his effort to control politically the universities and colleges of Georgia he had injected the dangerous question of race to justify the dismissal of certain university officials. His action raised a storm of disapproval in the state and caused the entire Georgia educational system to be discredited by every association and accrediting agency in the country. Taking advantage of his opportunity, the younger and less experienced Arnall fought a brilliant fight and, through sheer integrity and trustworthiness, won the nomination of the Democratic party for the governorship.

Arnall's political career in the State of Georgia has been little short of meteoric. He graduated from Sewanee in 1928, graduated from the law school of the University of Georgia in 1931, was elected to the House of Representatives in 1932, was elected speaker pro tem in his first term, was speaker of the House from 1932 to 1937, was appointed assistant attorney general in 1937, which office he held until 1939, became attorney general in 1939, and was elected governor of Georgia in 1942. He is the youngest man ever to be elected to that high office in his State.

Ellis Arnall is a native of Newnan, Georgia. His freshman year was spent at Mercer. He was a student at Sewanee from 1925 to 1928. His fraternity at Sewanee is Kappa Alpha.

Snowden Treadwell, was endowed by her husband, Mr. L. A. Treadwell.

Mr. Snowden's long and distinguished business career in Memphis was devoted to real estate, in which enterprise he was always associated with his brother, J. Bayard Snowden, and to banking in which he became vice-president of the Bank of Commerce. Sewanee friends of the Snowden family join with Memphis friends in mourning the loss of a distinguished citizen and alumnus.

Sewanee Men in Uniform

We publish below additions to the lists hitherto issued of Sewanee men in service, the number now being in excess of 600. The War Department has requested that addresses be omitted from such published lists. The Alumni Office will undertake, however, as a service to alumni to forward mail sent in its care, either to the latest military address or to the home address. Once more we bespeak the aid of all who read these columns in our efforts to compile as comprehensive a service record as possible.

Leon Jefferies Killed In Plane Crash

It is with regret that the News announces to the alumni the death of another young Sewanee aviator, Leon Jefferies, '42, killed on September 21 when the plane in which he was a passenger crashed near San Diego, California.

Leon Jefferies, of Birmingham, Alabama, entered the University in February, 1939. In August, 1941, while still in his junior year, he enlisted in the aviation branch of the Naval Reserve. After training in Atlanta, Pensacola, and Miami, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant and awarded the Golden Wings of the Marine Air Corps. At Sewanee, he was a member of the A.T.O. fraternity and played on the football team.

An all-out fighting family is the Cravens family of Sewanee. The Cravens boys, four of them, whose pictures appear on this page, are all in the service.

Schuessler and Moore Listed As Missing in Action

Sewanee was shocked at the receipt of news early this fall that Carl Schuessler, '39, and Baxter Moore, '37, both aviators, are reported "missing in action." The word in regard to Schuessler received on September 10 was followed early in October by similar word in regard to Baxter Moore.

Carl Schuessler, of Columbus, Georgia, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from the University in 1939. He entered the Theological School and, in the spring of his second year, enlisted in the aviation branch of the Naval Reserve. Commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Marine Air Corps, he was shortly assigned to foreign duty. At Sewanee Carl was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, of the Scholarship Society, and of Blue Key.

Baxter Moore, Jr., of Charlotte, North Carolina, was graduated from the University in the Class of 1937, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. After leaving Sewanee, he entered the Harvard School of Business Administration. He was connected with the firm of Procter and Gamble at the time of his enlistment in the Naval Air Corps about two years ago. He held the rank of lieutenant, junior grade. He was at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and had been on duty almost constantly since then at various places in the Pacific. He was married on May 15, 1942, to Miss Patricia Ostrander of Santa Monica, California. At Sewanee, Baxter was a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity and of Blue Key.

These two young men, graduates of recent years, were prominent in student circles and played football on the Sewanee varsity team. The memory of their student days is, therefore, still fresh in the minds of all Sewanee and their fortunes were being watched with deep interest and solicitude as they, like so many others, were carrying the spirit of Sewanee to far-flung battle fields. Their many friends here cherish the hope that they may soon receive the glad news of their safety and may finally welcome them back to the Mountain.

University Celebrates First Midwinter Commencement

Seventeen Graduated With Due Ceremony Large Majority of Class Enter Service at Once

As the first semester of the academic year 1942-1943 came to its close, with uncertainty as to the future of the University still hanging heavy over the Mountain, and with the prospect of a student body largely reduced by the likely call of some 75 Army reservists to active duty, Sewanee rose valiantly to the occasion of celebrating its first war-time midwinter Commencement under the accelerated program. A class of 17 was graduated with due form and ceremony and was sent forth into a world at war with Sewanee's stamp of final approval upon them.

Sunday, February 7, was Commencement Sunday. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. Cecil Seaman, D.D., an alumnus of the Class of 1903, Bishop of the Missionary District of North Texas. Bishop Seaman came back for the occasion to his Alma Mater to deliver the sermon to this class of which his son Henry was a member and for which he was the chosen spokesman at the graduating exercises on Monday.

Monday, February 8, was Commencement Day. The Commencement address was delivered by the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D.D., Bishop of Tennessee and Chancellor of the University.

Degrees were conferred as follows:

Campaign for Living Endowment Progresses

Dr. Guerry Recovering From an Attack of Coronary Thrombosis

Readers of the NEWS will be distressed to know of the illness of the Vice-Chancellor and relieved at the same time to hear that at this date, February 27, he is well on his way to complete recovery. On Saturday morning, January 30, he suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis. In view of the approaching midwinter Commencement and in order that his home might be open in its customary gracious hospitality, it was deemed wise to remove him to the hospital for care and quiet. He remained there four weeks, recovering his strength slowly, and today returned to his home. It is hoped that he will soon be able to see friends and to direct personally the affairs of the University. He will, however, be confined to his bed for some time and will be allowed only gradually to return to the active performance of his varied administrative functions. In the meantime, Sewanee carries on, regretful of the absence of her vigorous leader, anxious for his complete recovery, and determined that no agency shall fail him in his enforced absence.

midwinter dances became Commencement dances, held on Friday and Saturday nights. Parents and friends were present in goodly number to rejoice with the happy seventeen who were graduated. Difficulties of travel were overcome by the fair sex who came from far and wide to grace the dances.

Twelve members of the class will enter branches of service as follows: Army, six; Navy, five; Marines, one. Four enter theological school and one medical school.

An added shadow was cast on the Commencement celebration by the illness and enforced absence of the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Alexander Guerry. In the absence of the Vice-Chancellor, Dean George M. Baker was the acting Vice-Chancellor, and Prof. Henry M. Gass was the acting Dean.

One Hundred Chairmen Begin Active Work on February 9

According to plan, the campaign for the Living Endowment was launched in a hundred or more localities on February 9. The Vice-Chancellor is the general chairman of the campaign. The central office is at Sewanee under the immediate charge of Porter Ware, '26, who is a veteran of the campaign for the Sustaining Fund. Alumni and friends in a hundred or more key cities have accepted posts as local chairmen. The literature of the campaign for the Sustaining Fund has been supplemented by new material consisting of two pamphlets entitled "A Living Endowment for Sewanee," and "The Alumni Fund of The University of the South," and by Dr. Guerry's widely read essay "War and Liberal Arts Education," reprinted from the winter number of the "Sewanee Review."

The objective of the campaign was stated in the last issue of the NEWS: $75,000 a year in gifts for Sewanee, $25,000 from the Sewanee Dioceses and $50,000 from individual subscriptions. Sources of these subscriptions will be: (1) present subscribers to the Sustaining Fund who will be asked to continue their contributions; (2) alumni who have not been subscribers to the Sustaining Fund; and (3) other public spirited people who will accept responsibility for the maintenance of an institution devoted to Christian liberal education.

In the organized areas, systematic campaigns will be conducted. Alumni and others who are not in organized areas will be reached by mail from Sewanee and urged to join in this great effort to strengthen and maintain The University of the South. There may be alumni whose only knowledge of this vital campaign will be through these columns, those in far away places, those in training camps, those out on the battle front. They too may signify their love of Sewanee and their desire to share in her support by sending in direct either to the Alumni Office or

*Vice-Chancellor Champions
Cause of Liberal Arts*

It is peculiarly appropriate and peculiarly gratifying that at this time of storm and stress for the cause of the Liberal Arts. Sewanee has produced in the person of her Vice-Chancellor the most eloquent, fearless, and convincing voice for that cause in the whole American educational scene.

Sewanee has been throughout her history faithful to this cause and has been characterized "as the purest type of Liberal Arts College in America." From time to time the pressure has been strong on the University of the South to abandon her traditional position and to incorporate into her curriculum pre-professional and vocational courses. Though this pressure has been consistently resisted, there have been times when even the most convinced proponents of pure liberal culture have wavered and have all but been persuaded of the necessity of yielding.

Out of the exigencies of war has arisen the movement which seems to sound the death-knell of liberal education, certainly for the duration and, as some see it, perhaps forever. It is the program of the War Department whereby at 18 all young men are inducted into the service, out of whom selected ones are returned to college for a brief period of highly specialized technical training.

At the meeting of the Association of American Colleges, held in Philadelphia in early December, this program of the War Department was presented for consideration, not one voice being raised to present the claims of liberal education. It was at this point that Dr. Guerry took up the gauntlet and began his energetic campaign for a hearing for the liberal arts colleges. He made it clear from the outset that Sewanee and all liberal arts colleges were ready and willing to make any and every sacrifice necessary to the primary concern of winning the war. He questioned, however, the necessity and the expediency of the sacrifice, and proposed that the program of the War Department include provision for training of students in the liberal arts as well as in the specialized business of war.

Beginning at the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, he moved to the Commencement (Continued on page 4)

ON THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE LIVING ENDOWMENT

On Sunday, January 16, the Vice-Chancellor received a telegram bringing the gratifying news that the mortgage of $45,000 on Hoffman Hall had been cancelled.

In announcing the cancellation of this mortgage, the Vice-Chancellor stated that the University is now entirely free of debt to any outside person or agency. The sole remaining obligation of the University is its long-time bond of $300,000 which is owed to itself and the retirement of which is provided for through a sinking fund. Debt to the amount of $309,000 has been retired in the past three and one-half years, as follows:

Floating Debt (Notes to Banks and Individuals)	$167,000
Returned to Endowment and Restricted Funds	22,000
Provident Loan	75,000
Hoffman Hall Mortgage	45,000
	$309,000

In four years, the Sustaining Fund has brought about this consummation, freedom from the burden of debt. Alumni may well feel pride in the results of this fund, so largely their work. Nor is freedom from debt all. Financial stability, a balanced budget, increased salaries and wages, a completely renovated plant, the confidence of loyal friends resulting in substantial gifts to permanent endowment and of educational boards resulting in gifts of $50,000 each to the library and to the science departments—these things and even the coming of the Navy, which seems reasonably certain, can all be (Continued on page 4)

Diocesan Support of the University is Reviewed

At the close of the year 1942 there was published from the office of the Vice-Chancellor a statement that will be of great interest to alumni and friends of Sewanee. This statement printed in the table shown above sets forth in detail contributions for the calendar year of 1942 to the support of the University made by the dioceses of the Episcopal Church that share the ownership of Sewanee. The amount contributed reaches the impressive total of $21,137.69.

A brief survey of the history of church support of the University of the South reveals some interesting facts. From the earliest days of the University, the Sewanee Dioceses accepted some measure of financial responsibility. As early as 1882, church support had taken the definite form of an annual apportionment accepted by the various dioceses for the support of the Theological Department. This plan operated with varying success until 1912. According to a letter from Bishop Bratton which appears in that year in the Proceedings of the Board of Trustees, the average amount contributed annually by the Sewanee dioceses amounted to $3,518.00. The high point in such support was about $5,000.00.

In 1912, the so-called Nelson plan, proposed by Bishop Nelson of Georgia, was instituted, in accordance with which the various dioceses undertook, in addition to their contributions to the Theological Department, to assume responsibility for a proportionate amount of permanent endowment for (Continued on page 4)

The Navy Considers Sewanee For Educational Program

A delegation from the Navy visited Sewanee February 27—March 1 to make a survey of the University with a view to establishing here a unit of the Navy's educational program. The delegation consisted of Lt. Comdr. Edwin Phillips in command, Lt. F. J. Sabatier who surveyed the academic set-up, Dr. W. V. Ayers, medical officer, and Ensign C. D. Glass, engineer who checked the University's plant and equipment. The Vice-Chancellor, still confined to his room, was able to interview the officers and to state his wishes. The actual survey was under the direction of Dean Baker, acting Vice-Chancellor, and Harris C. Moore, business manager.

The Navy's educational program, designated V-12, contemplates the use especially of the small liberal arts colleges for the academic training of prospective officer personnel. The phase of this program as it applies to Sewanee would be the training of deck officers and Marine line officers. The students would be drawn from various sources: high-school seniors under eighteen years of age enlisting in the Naval Reserve; selected students under the draft who state preference for the Navy; selected students from enlisted Navy personnel; college students already in the Naval Reserve under the old V-1 and V-5 programs, and the Marine Enlisted Reserve. The curriculum will emphasize fundamental college work in mathematics, science, English, history, engineering, drawing, and physical training, with the provision that students may carry elective courses in case either that such courses do not interfere with assigned duties or that the college is satisfied that the student has adequately covered subjects included in the basic curriculum. According to an official Naval Department release of February 21, 1943, the length of the course will be four consecutive terms of sixteen weeks or one and one-third years of residence in college.

This program of the Navy is the one that for many reasons Sewanee prefers and made every effort to secure. It gives a reasonably long length of residence in the University. It allows for the continuance of the liberal arts curriculum as elective work. In all cases it takes a maximum of three-fourths of the facilities of the college, thus allowing it to continue its regular educational functions for the students under draft age and for such other students as may for various reasons be allowed to continue in college. It is expected that announcement of colleges chosen under the program will be made within the next few weeks. The members of the delegation from the Navy expressed themselves as highly pleased in every detail with Sewanee's location, facilities, and adequacy for the program. The program, it has been announced, will be inaugurated about July 1. If Sewanee is chosen, the number of students assigned to the University will be approximately 300. The Inn, Cannon, Johnson, and Hoffman Halls will be used by the Navy.

War Takes Its Toll of Sewanee Student Body

Enrollment statistics for the second semester show very clearly the effect of the war on the Sewanee student body. Out of an original enrollment this fall in the college of 264, increased by 4 who entered at the second semester, 92 have withdrawn for various reasons. The college enrollment stands therefore, at this date, February 23, at 176, little more than one half of the enrollment of two years ago. Of the 92 who have left, 49 have gone into the various branches of the service, 15 were graduated, 28 withdrew for other reasons such as illness, finances, transfer to other colleges, or academic delinquency. Of the 17 who graduated 12 go into the service. Of the 176 who are at present enrolled, 45 are in the Army Reserve and face the prospect of an early call. The enrollment in the college for the second semester may, therefore, at any date be reduced to 131. It is indicative of the high morale of the student body that at the opening of the second semester, though the Army Reservists had been notified of the probability of receiving their call within two weeks, two-thirds or more of their number enrolled in the college.

traced directly or indirectly to the Sustaining Fund.

This fact highlights the vital importance of the present campaign for the Living Endowment. The Sustaining Fund has made strong Sewanee's foundations. The Living Endowment will guarantee to Sewanee for all time the strength to lead in the fight for the cause of liberal education in which our American way of life has its roots. To this end great resources, material and spiritual, will be required. The Navy program will give security to the University through these war years. That is not enough. Sewanee must in these same years, at great expense, maintain her liberal arts curriculum in order thereby to make her impact on these prospective young officers of the Navy and on the other students who will continue to come to the University. Sewanee must be strong for this task as well as for the task that lies ahead in the postwar years. The Living Endowment adds up to this: it is the means whereby Sewanee can exercise a major influence on the course of American education, a purpose as old as her founders, the realization of which is now within her grasp.

the University. The dioceses were not to pay to the University the principal but the annual interest, which should go into the operating budget of the University. These two plans of support operated in conjunction until 1921, gradually merging however into one plan. The peak of this plan of support was reached in 1913 when the joint contributions reached the sum of $10,000.00. Thereafter, the amount began to decline.

Beginning in the year 1916, there was a series of campaigns: in 1916, the Debt Campaign for $300,000.00, brought to a successful conclusion by the Vice-Chancellor, Bishop Knight; in 1919, the Million Dollar Endowment Campaign, begun by Bishop Knight and carried to a successful conclusion by Dr. Finney early in his administration; and the Expansion Fund instituted in 1926, highly successful in its early stages, and interrupted before its conclusion by the depression of 1929.

During these years, the original plan of annual diocesan support of the University largely gave way to the serious effort of drawing upon every resource to provide an adequate permanent endowment. In the twenty-year period from 1917 to 1936, the total amount contributed by dioceses, parishes, and individuals both for capital funds and for operating expense amounted to $1,040,792.86.

Since 1936, the plan has evolved which resulted last year in the contribution by the Sewanee dioceses in one year of the sum of $21,137.69 for operating expense. Beginning in the form of Sewanee Sunday, a day set aside on which in every parish in the twenty-two Sewanee dioceses an offering for Sewanee should be taken up, it has grown into the present plan whereby every diocese and parish includes in its annual budget a gift to the University for operating expenses.

The relation of this church support to the larger plan of the campaign for a Living Endowment has already been explained in these columns: an annual income for the University of $75,000.00, $50,000.00 from individuals, $25,000.00 from the church. That the goal has so nearly been reached by the Sewanee Dioceses should give strength and courage to the workers in the other phase of the campaign.

mittee on the Liberal Arts College of the Association of American Colleges, of which he is a member. On December 27, at the invitation of the Chattanooga Times, he published in that paper an article, the outgrowth and the summation of his various public utterances in the cause. This article has attracted nation wide attention and reprints in large numbers have been requested by a distinguished eastern educator for the purpose of publicizing in eastern educational circles this valiant and sound presentation of the cause of liberal culture.

The climax in Dr. Guerry's championship of Sewanee's cause and the cause of liberal culture for which Sewanee stands was reached on the occasion of the alumni dinner held recently in Washington. Present by invitation at the dinner was the Hon. J. J. Sparkman, Congressman from Alabama, member of the House Military Affairs Committee. So impressed was Mr. Sparkman by Dr. Guerry's talk at the dinner that he invited him to appear before the House Military Affairs Committee at a closed executive session and present his views as to the place of the liberal arts college in the army educational program. This invitation Dr. Guerry accepted and according to information received made a most favorable impression.

That every Sewanee alumnus may follow Sewanee and the Vice-Chancellor in this timely vindication of the cause of liberal culture, we print selections taken from his article published in the Chattanooga Times:

"In and for a great war, in and for a sustained war effort, the philosophy of life to which the men and officers hold is as important as competent leadership. The liberal arts college, the liberal arts curriculum, study in the great fields of knowledge does give a man a philosophy of life, does give him an understanding of the meaning and purpose of life, does bring to him a sense of values, does give him an appreciation of spiritual ideals.

"He knows the meaning of freedom, liberty, justice, equality of opportunity, the dignity of life, and other great concepts because through history, literature, philosophy, and like subjects he has seen something of the struggle of the human race since the beginning of time to achieve freedom, liberty, justice, equality of opportunity, and the dignity of life. He knows that there are such things as good and evil not because someone has stated this fact, but because in his liberal arts studies he has perceived the eternal conflict between good and evil in the world for the mastery of man. He can comprehend, therefore, in a war like the present conflict the issues at stake, and for that reason he will persevere to the end for victory. He will never surrender, he will never despair. In a short war, this is important. In a long war, this is the most vital and essential quality in the armed forces and in the people of a nation. The determination to win, an unfaltering stout-heartedness built on understanding, is the chief component of victory in a long, hard conflict.

"We, in America, cannot possibly escape a materialistic attitude and concept of life, if our educational process is to become materialistic. Triumphs in the material world, miraculous inventions of every sort, material wealth and progress, are external to the soul of man, or enslave the soul of man unless the world of science and invention, unless the world of transportation and commerce and trade is ruled by spiritual and cultural concepts of life or by men who are governed by spiritual idealism and experiences of the liberal arts tradition.

"The cradle of democracy is the educational philosophy of the liberal arts colleges unique to the Anglo-Saxon people. Democracy was born out of the liberal tradition. Democracy will remain only so long as men and women are trained in this tradition, in that concept of education that emphasizes the enduring values of life and exalts the intellectual and spiritual growth of man as the chief object of education and the chief purpose of our colleges and universities."

New York Alumni Greet the Vice-Chancellor

The NEWS is indebted to Harding Woodall, '17, Secretary and Treasurer of the New York Alumni Association, for the following account of the annual dinner on the occasion of the visit of the Vice-Chancellor.

"About sixty Sewanee alumni and their friends gathered for the annual Alumni Dinner at the Harvard Club in New York City on Thursday, January 21.

"William Nauts, '23, the president of the Association, presided. The Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Guerry, was the principal guest and speaker. Dr. Paul F. Cadman, '11, Economist of the American Bankers Association, delivered an inspiring address. Thomas "Beans" Evans, '03, of Philadelphia, spoke entertainingly of his days at Sewanee, paying tribute to Herman Suter, coach of the famous football teams of 1899 and 1900 and one of his star players. "Rex" Kilpatrick, '01, both of whom were present. Dr. Guerry was inspiring as usual with his explanations of the University's financial progress and growth in recent years and of his efforts for the preservation of the liberal arts education not only at Sewanee but throughout the country.

"Many of the 'regulars' were missed this year because of service with the Armed Forces, among them Edmund Beckwith, '10, Hueling Davis, Jr., '23, in the Army, Bob Gamble, '34, U. S. Navy, Captain Jimmie Bull, '00, who is on active duty with the Navy in California, and Ben Wasson, '21, U. S. Navy, who is 'somewhere' in the Pacific having survived the sinking of the aircraft carrier Hornet.

"Officers of the Association elected for the ensuing year were William B. Nauts, '23, President, James P. Kranz, Jr., '34, Vice-President, and Harding Woodall, '17, Secretary and Treasurer.

"The following alumni and guests were present at the dinner: Messrs. Douglas G. Adair, Jr., '33; Andrew J. Aldridge, '09; J. M. Avent, '19; William J. Barney, '05; John D. Babbage, '10; Eower W. Washington Alumni Applaud Dr. Guerry

George W. Neville, '23, president of the Washington, D. C., alumni chapter, has been good enough to write the story of the alumni dinner given recently on the occasion of the visit of the Vice-Chancellor to Washington. Your hard-pressed editor, lacking the paraphernalia of a "re-write desk" has chosen to quote directly part of Mr. Neville's very interesting letter.

"I shall take the lazy man's way of answering your letter in which you request information concerning the dinner given by the Sewanee alumni in the Washington area in honor of the Vice-Chancellor on the evening of Wednesday, January 20th, at the Broadmoor Hotel. That way consists of putting the facts in a letter and leaving it to your 're-write desk' to weave the facts into a news story.

"The festivities were not slated to begin until 7:15, but the boys began trickling in around 6:30. Between that hour and 8:15 when the dinner proper began, the time was consumed renewing old friendships and starting new ones over cocktails and singing Sewanee songs to the accompaniment of Dr. Charles W. Sheerin at the piano.

"The honorary alumni present at the dinner included Dr. Albert H. Lucas, Dr. Archie M. Palmer and Dr. Charles W. Sheerin. Dr. Lucas is the headmaster at St. Alban's School for Boys; Dr. Palmer is Assistant Director of Food Rationing in the Office of Price Administration; and Dr. Sheerin is Rector of Epiphany Church in Washington.

"The guests included Rev. Hunter M. Lewis, who is Dr. Sheerin's assistant at Epiphany, and the Honorable John J. Sparkman of Huntsville, Alabama, Congressman from the 8th Congressional District of Alabama. I might say that Mr. Sparkman was so impressed by Dr. Guerry's talk at the dinner that he invited him to appear before the House Military Affairs Committee (of which Sparkman is a member) at a closed (executive) session of the Committee, and present his views as to the place of the liberal arts colleges in the Army educational program. He accepted the invitation, and I am advised that he made a splendid presentation which made a most favorable impression upon the members.

"Listing alphabetically those present who formerly sojourned on the Mount, there were: John D. Babbage, '10, Lieut. Colonel George S. Berry, '19, Newell Blair, '29, G. Mallory Buford, '32, Ensign Henry C. Cortes, Jr., '39, G. Bowdoin Craighill, Sr., '03, Major Wm. G. deRosset, '06, Lieut. Robert W. Fort (US Army), '33, Lieut. Robert M. Gamble (US Navy), '34, Dr. Thomas N. E. Greville, '30, Rev. Edward B. Harris, '18, Mercer G. Johnston, '98, J. Coates Lear, '36, Clendon H. Lee, '41, Jonathan N. Mitchell, '38, Major Orin H. Moore, '32, George W. Neville, '23, Rev. Theodore Patton, '29, Dr. Charles S. Piggot, '14, Lieut. Charles Poellnitz, (US Navy), '30, Lieut. Rutledge J. Rice, (US Navy), '33, Dr. Siert Riepma, '33, John T. Whitaker, '27, Franklin O. Wicks, '44, Lieut. Col. James A. Wise, Jr., '30, Lewis Wood, '04, and the Vice-Chancellor.

"The only speaker was the Vice-Chancellor—because the crowd wanted it that way. At the end of ten minutes he attempted to sit down, but 'More' was the demand. It was some forty minutes before he was permitted to conclude. So inspiring was his talk that its conclusion brought the gathering to its feet with applause.

"The dinner concluded with the election of officers. They are: George W. Neville, President; John D. Babbage, First Vice-President; Dr. Charles S. Piggot, Second Vice-President; and Dr. Siert Riepma, Secretary.

"Following the dinner, movies of Sewanee were shown. Clendon Lee alternated with Dr. Guerry as narrator.

"With 'pleasure driving' out for the duration and with Washington a city of truly 'magnificent distances,' transportation is quite difficult. Under the circumstances, I think it is a fair statement that the turn-out was splendid."

Recent Activities of Other Alumni Groups

Frank Gillespie reports a luncheon held in San Antonio at Christmas time. Absent were many of the regulars, young and old, now in the service of the country. The guests of the occasion were the San Antonio boys now in the University and their families.

In December, a group of Memphis alumni met with C. W. Butler, president of the Memphis alumni chapter, to have lunch with Dr. Guerry and lay plans for the approaching campaign in Memphis for the Living Endowment.

The Vice-Chancellor was the guest of the Diocese of Arkansas at its annual Diocesan Convention which met in Little Rock, January 27-28. A special invitation had been sent out by the Bishop to all alumni in the state to gather for the occasion. On the evening of January 27, after a reception and a buffet supper given in his honor by Bishop and Mrs. Mitchell, Dr. Guerry addressed the convention.

On the Mountain

Gordon Clark Accepts Commission in the Navy

Gordon Morris Clark, '27, a veteran in the service of Sewanee, has left his post as Director of Athletics to accept a commission in the Navy. He reported on February 11 to the University of North Carolina where he entered training to become athletic instructor in the Navy's pre-flight program.

Clark, a native of Memphis, came to Sewanee in 1923 and was graduated with the Class of 1927. He played on the freshman football team of 1923 and was on the varsity squad in '24, '25, '26, a high point in Sewanee athletics which included the memorable victory over the Commodores in '24. His fraternity at Sewanee was Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

After three years spent in Memphis coaching high school football he returned to Sewanee in 1930 to take up the duties of Athletic Director and Organizing Secretary of the Associated Alumni. To these already complex duties, he added the job of Coach of freshman football in 1931, when Hec Clark took over the Varsity. In 1939, he gave up his work in the Alumni Office to concentrate on his duties as Director of Athletics in which capacity he has served the University loyally and efficiently for the past five years.

Clark's long record at Sewanee has made him a well-known figure in Southern athletics. He was at the helm in Sewanee's long struggle to maintain her place of traditional dignity in Southern football circles, which culminated when Sewanee bowed out of the Southeastern Conference and finally, after two years of football as a member of no conference, gave up inter-collegiate sport. During all his years as Athletic Director, Clark, looking to some plan which would bring all students into competitive sport, was working out a program of intramural athletics which has developed into Sewanee's present highly satisfactory system of intramural competition in all major and minor sports. Quite recently, he has very successfully adapted the athletic program of the University to the war effort with the result that every able bodied student at Sewanee is engaged in some form of athletic competition or physical exercise.

Lt. Gordon Clark leaves Sewanee with the good wishes of the Mountain and of all Sewanee alumni. His family will continue to live, at least for the present, in their home at Sewanee.

JOHNNY HODGES ENTERS NAVY

Another member of the University family has answered the call of his country. Irel Hall Hodges, Librarian of the University, received his commission as Ensign in the United States Naval Reserve and reported on March 1 to Fort Schuyler, New York. "Johnny" Hodges, as he has been familiarly known to students and friends for the past ten years, has won the affection and esteem of all who have been associated with him. He is a native of Paducah, Kentucky, and an alumnus both of the University of Kentucky where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts and of Vanderbilt University where he received the degree of Master of Arts and completed residence requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. One year, however, as a special student in the University and nine years' residence on the Mountain have made him a Sewanee man all the way. Sewanee, therefore, claims Johnny Hodges and wishes him God-speed until he returns to take up his life among us.

Major MacKellar Recovers From Long Illness

Major MacKellar, much improved, has returned to his home on the Mountain. An interview with the Major reveals the fact that during the five months spent at the Vanderbilt Hospital he went through illness and suffering enough to break the spirit of any man who did not put into the fight for life and recovery a strong heart and an indomitable will. Friends of Major MacKellar know that he possesses these qualities of character in abundance. He has won the fight and, back again on this Mountain which he loves so well, he grows stronger day by day. In these uncertain times, Sewanee needs the wisdom and courage of Major MacKellar and looks forward to the day when he may once more give to her councils the benefit and the inspiration of his presence.

Tablet in Chapel Honors Dr. Stewart McQueen

On Sunday morning, January 20, a tablet was erected in All Saints' Chapel to the memory of the Rev. Stewart McQueen, D.D., '81, deceased. The tablet, the gift of his family, was presented to the University by Dr. McQueen's daughter, Mrs. Mary McQueen

Summer Sessions at Both University and Academy

Both the University and the Military Academy will conduct summer sessions. Because of the prospect of the coming of the Navy contingent on July 1, and the demands which that program will make on the faculty, the session at the University will be restricted entirely to freshmen who desire to begin their college work in June and to upper classmen now enrolled in the University whose limited time requires them to attend summer school. Alumni can be of service by passing this word to prospective freshmen of their acquaintance. The session at the Academy will include the full curriculum for all years. For detailed information, requests should be directed to the Superintendent.

McDonald. In the absence of the Vice Chancellor it was received by Dea George M. Baker. The service of dedication was conducted by the Chaplain and the Rev. George B. Myers. Present were many residents of the Mountain, friends of Dr. McQueen, and students including his grandson Douglas McQueen, a sophomore in the University. The tablet commemorates the life-long devotion to the University of Dr. McQueen, who was, almost continuously from 1886 until his death in 1923, a member of the Board of Trustees and was for twelve years secretary of the Board of Regents.

Col. Quintard Reported A Prisoner of War

Official news has been received that Col. Alexander Shepherd Quintard first reported as missing in action, is held as a prisoner of war, along with Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright and other American officers, by the Japanese at Taiwan Camp on the island of Formosa. This ends for his family and his many friends at Sewanee a period of suspense that has lasted since the fall of Corregidor. The last issue of the News carried the story of this hero of Bataan who for gallant and meritorious service was awarded last fall in absence the Distinguished Service Medal. Col. Quintard, an alumnus of the Academy, is the grandson of Bishop Quintard, first Vice-Chancellor of the University.

1942 Sewanee Tigers Make the Headlines

Grantland Rice, well-known sports writer and commentator, in an article dated February 20, paid high tribute to Sewanee football. After recalling the glories and heroes of the past, especially the famous team of '99, he turns to Sewanee's latest contribution to football history, the team of '42, a team composed of men who played the game for the sheer love of the game, without a professional coach, without a schedule, without any expectation of glory. The story of this team he learned from Coach Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech, who told him how he sent up to the mountain in response to a request for a game "a good freshman outfit, well trained and coached. They had a great battle in the cloud and fog that frequently obscured the playing field. But my boys told me that the untrained, uncoached Sewanee team fought like tigers. All Sewanee had was a football and a few left-over uniforms, plus unbreakable spirit and a love of the game.

"If little Sewanee," Alexander comments, "hidden away on a mountain, without a schedule or a coach, can carry on football against such heavy odds, why should other colleges and universities quit? Here is an example every college should follow."

Sewanee won the game, 7-0.

About Sewanee Alumni

Wood Reelected President of Washington Gridiron Club

Lewis Gaynor Wood, '04, veteran member of the New York Times Bureau in Washington, was recently re-elected president of the Washington Gridiron Club, the first president to be so honored in twenty-four years.

The Gridiron Club, which makes the headlines each year with its famous skits lampooning men in public life, is composed of the country's outstanding newspaper men. Mr. Wood, long a figure in the activities of the club, has been author of many of these skits and has often played parts in his own skits and in those composed by others.

Lewis Wood, a native of Columbia, South Carolina, entered the University in 1900 and was at Sewanee for two years. On leaving the University, he began his newspaper career on the Columbia State. Like many other gifted Southern newspaper men, of whom Sewanee boasts a goodly number, he gravitated to New York in 1909. Until 1916, he was with the Tribune, serving two years with that paper's London bureau. In 1918 he joined the staff of the Times, his work with that paper taking him, in his own words "all over the lot." From the first, however, he devoted himself to politics and especially to the United States Senate. In late years he has specialized on the Department of Justice, the Supreme Court, and the Office of War Information.

Sewanee's First Football Captain Dies in Washington

Alexander Roby Shepherd, '95, died on February 28 in Washington, D. C., after an illness of several months. Alex Shepherd, as a co-organizer of football at Sewanee and the Captain of the first Tiger team, ranks among Sewanee's immortals. In 1941 he came from his home in Alexandria, Va., to be present with five other members of that history-making team at the celebration of the semi-centennial of Sewanee football. For twenty years previous to his death, Mr. Shepherd was attached to the evaluation section of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington, an expert on appraisal and assessment of mining properties. For this task he was well trained by a life spent in mining operations, first in Mexico and later in this country. The epic story of the Shepherd family and their life in Mexico is the subject of a book, "The Silver Magnet," written by Grant Shepherd and published in 1938.

Mr. Shepherd's Sewanee connections were many. His wife, who survives him, was Miss Phoebe Elliott, daughter of Bishop R. W. B. Elliott, of the diocese of West Texas, and sister of Miss Charlotte Elliott and Dr. Robert W. B. Elliott who reside in Sewanee. His brother, Grant Shepherd, above referred to, who died four years ago, was a member of the class of '96. His sister,

Cabell Greet Publishes Book on War Words

Dr. W. Cabell Greet, '20, associate professor of English at Barnard College, Columbia University and pronunciation specialist for the Columbia Broadcasting System, is the author of a book recently published by the Columbia University Press entitled "War Words." This global war covers a lot of territory and in this volume the author, nothing daunted, "goes all the way from Aaland (Fin. Isls.) to Zverero (Rus.) and a good deal further geographically." The pronunciations are indicated in two simple keys and should be of great assistance both to the accuracy and the morale of anyone who has the temerity to essay them.

Guy Lyman, Loyal Alumnus, Dies in Denver

Guy C. Lyman, '23, died recently in Denver, Colorado. He had been living in Denver since 1941 whither he had moved to become district manager of the Union Central Life Insurance Company for Colorado, Wyoming, and part of Nebraska. A native of New Orleans, he was engaged there in the life insurance business for eighteen years, and became a prominent figure in insurance affairs in that city. At Sewanee, he was active in student affairs, serving at various times as proctor, head cheer-leader, manager of the football team, and president of the German Club. He was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. Since leaving Sewanee he had been active in all alumni enterprises in New Orleans.

May Shepherd, was the wife of Edward Quintard, '82, and mother of Col. Alex Quintard, who is a prisoner of war of the Japanese.

Duncan Gray Elected Bishop of Mississippi

Latest addition to the long line of Sewanee bishops is the newly-elected Bishop of Mississippi, Duncan Montgomery Gray, '25. He succeeds the late Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, D.D., who died early in November of last year and, following Bishops Bratton and Green, is the third Sewanee alumnus in succession to become Bishop of Mississippi. As he takes his place as the youngest bishop in point of seniority in the episcopal succession, he finds his distinguished predecessor, the Rt. Rev. Theodore DuBose Bratton, second in point of seniority, the senior bishop being another son of Sewanee, the Rt. Rev. W. H. Moreland, D.D., '81, retired, of the Diocese of Sacramento.

The Bishop-elect of Mississippi is a native of that state, having been born of Mississippi parents in the city of Meridian. His college and theological education took him to Rice Institute, to Mississippi State, and finally in 1922 to Sewanee. He was for one year a student in the College and for three years a student in the Theological School. His ministry has been spent entirely in Mississippi, at Rosedale, Canton, Columbus, and Greenwood.

The records in the Alumni Office show that in 1923 Duncan Gray was editor-in-chief of the Cap and Gown and in the same year manager of the Glee Club. His fraternity at Sewanee was Kappa Alpha. The records further show that he has not been without close Sewanee ties in the intervening years. Two nephews, Edward W. Sanford, '27, and Thomas M. Sanford, '30, came to Sewanee through his influence. Mrs. Gray was before her marriage Miss Isabel McCrady, the daughter of the Rev. Edward McCrady, '88, and sister of Dr. Edward McCrady, Jr., Professor of Biology in the University.

Sewanee Loses Loyal Friend In Death of Frank L. Polk

Frank Lyon Polk, Hon. D.C.L., '23, died on February 7, at his home in New York City. He was the grandson of Lt. Gen. Leonidas Polk, the "Fighting Bishop," of the Confederacy, whose name is revered as one of the founders of the University. Dr. Polk was born in New York, and was a graduate of Yale University and Columbia Law School, but he was always loyal both to his southern background and to The University of the South with which the name of Polk was so closely associated. In the midst of an active and useful life which carried him to the high post of Under Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson, he did not forget Sewanee and on numerous occasions showed himself friend and benefactor. Sewanee has lost a faithful supporter and one on whom she was proud to confer in 1923 the honorary degree of D.C.L.

Sewanee Men in Uniform

We publish below additions to the lists hitherto published of Sewanee men in uniform, the number now being in excess of 700. Thanks to tireless efforts on the part of the entire staff of the Alumni Office, to the cooperation of professors, students, and residents of the Mountain, to the parents and alumni who have been good enough to respond to our many requests for information, there is being compiled in the Alumni Office a record of the war activities of Sewanee alumni that will be invaluable for the future. Once more we repeat our request for information to all who read these columns and call attention to the form printed on page 12 of this issue. If your name does not appear on our rolls, it is because someone has failed to cooperate.

Crockett Promoted to Rank of Brigadier General

James C. Crockett, '12, again makes the headlines in the ALUMNI NEWS. In the issue of March, 1942, it was reported that he had been promoted to the rank of Colonel. Early in February he was raised to the rank of Brigadier General and is assistant Chief of Staff G-2 (Military Intelligence) of the Armored Force, which has its headquarters at Fort Knox, Kentucky. For our information we are indebted to the Public Relations Bureau and for the fine picture of the General to the Signal Section, both of Headquarters, Armored Forces, Fort Knox. Sewanee boasts two officers high in the ranks of this specialized phase of modern mechanized warfare, Brigadier General Crockett and Major General Alvan C. Gillem, Commanding General of the Second Armored Corps.

Marines Name Air Field For Carl I. Schuessler

The Marine Corps has announced the naming of an air field in honor of the first two American pilots lost in the campaign in the Solomon Islands. One of these pilots was Lieutenant Carl I. Schuessler, '38, who was reported in the last issue of the News as "missing in action." Copies of an order from his commanding officer to the commanding general of the Marine Corps and of a letter to Mrs. Schuessler, mother of Lieutenant Schuessler, from Captain Ralph R. Yeaman of Schuessler's own command, Marine Corps Unit No.—, have been received in the Alumni Office. Both bear eloquent witness to the fact that Carl Schuessler showed himself at all times a true and loyal son of Sewanee, diligent in the performance of his duty, brave in the face of danger and above all mindful that, even though he was fighting in the armed forces of his country at war, he had devoted his life to the sacred ministry. We publish herewith in full Capt. Yeaman's letter.

Marine Corps Unit No.—
c/o Postmaster
San Francisco, California

December 2, 1942

Mrs. J. W. Schuessler,
135 Broadway,
Columbus, Georgia.

Dear Mrs. Schuessler:

In reference to your son, Second Lieutenant Carl I. Schuessler, who was under this command for duty overseas, has been reported missing at sea.

Lieutenant Schuessler, with one other officer from this command selected as observers on a special mission, was last reported aboard the U. S. S. —, August 7, 1942.

Lieutenant Schuessler was last seen by an eye witness manning a machine gun in the rear seat of an airplane on deck and caring for the wounded on the after part of the ship while it was under heavy fire from enemy forces.

During Lieutenant Schuessler's tour of duty under my command his conduct was above reproach, was sincere, and he diligently performed his duties in an excellent manner.

Lieutenant Schuessler possessed one of the most versatile personalities within the range of my experience. Aboard ship he entertained all hands with his acrobatic stunts that we all enjoyed.

LT. CARL I. SCHUESSLER, '38

On Sunday mornings Lieutenant Schuessler held Divine Services for the ship's crew and all personnel aboard, from which all gained spiritual food that was indeed a great help during these pressing times.

Lieutenant Schuessler's leadership and gentlemanly conduct won him the respect and admiration of all officers and men of this command.

In memory of these two officers missing in the initial battle of the Solomons we have named the air field here in their honor.

Sincerely,

Ralph R. Yeaman,
Captain, USMC

Three Alumni Decorated For Distinguished Service

News has been received from far-flung battle fields that three more Sewanee men have been cited for bravery and received the appropriate rewards for distinguished service. With pride and pleasure, for the information of the alumni far and wide, we give special mention to these three young men, whose pictures appear on this page.

Capt. R. Brown McGaughey, '41; received the air medal at the hands of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle for the performance of a particularly hazardous offensive transporting paratroops into Tunisia on November 29, a part of the citation being as follows: "The complete success of the mission was due to the excellent piloting, timing, and handling of aircraft over the dropping area;" a native of Dallas, Texas; a student in the University for two years, '37-'39; a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity; promoted to the rank of captain in January.

Lt. Jack P. Thompson, '38; first made the news as one of the "three musketeers" who had achieved quite a reputation by their "hell for leather flying" in the North African campaign, taking transports under the nose of enemy fighters and getting through despite weather and Messerschmidts; decorated by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle "for performance of an extremely hazardous offensive in the transportation of troops into Tunisia on November 29;" a native of Helena, Arkansas; a student in the University for two years, '34-'36; a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Lt. Charles H. Vale, '41; second in command of a boarding party, which dared explosions and flames to check the cargo of a scuttled Nazi blockade-runner sinking in the South Atlantic; cited for personal bravery and recommended for the Navy Cross; a native of Kenosha, Wisconsin; a student of the University for one year, '38-'39; a pledge of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

ROBERT G. SNOWDEN, '40, is a Captain in the U. S. Marine Corps. After graduation from Quantico in May, 1941, he saw active duty in the Southwest Pacific. Later assigned to flight training, he was in January of this year at the Naval Air Station in New Orleans.

HATTENDORF RECOVERING FROM SERIOUS WOUNDS

Lt. Richard L. Hattendorf, '42, seriously wounded in action in Northwest Africa on February 3, is, according to latest reports, making normal progress. Hattendorf, a native of Wheaton, Illinois, was a student in the University for three years, '38-'41. He is a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. After the usual preliminary training, he was graduated on April 29, 1942, from the Lubbock Army Flying School. His first overseas station was in Northern Ireland, whence he was transferred to North Africa. In a letter to Professor Lewis dated December 13, 1942 he writes: "In the first mail we got here I received the large envelope containing the Sewanee stickers. Thanks a lot. The reproduction of the stalking tiger sure looks good on my ship."

The Three Sory Brothers Enter the Navy Together

Last year, in response to a Navy appeal for more doctors to serve the growing fleet, three Sewanee alumni, the brothers Sory, made simultaneous applications and were simultaneously given commissions. The two elder, Bailey and Robert, were commissioned Lieutenant Commanders and the youngest, Curtis, was made Lieutenant.

Natives of Cedar Hill, Tennessee, all are graduates of the University, Bailey receiving his B.A. in 1920, Robert his B.S. in 1927, Curtis his B.S. in 1929. They were all members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

After graduation from medical school, they all three practised their profession in Florida where without exception they rose to prominence, Bailey in Palm Beach, Robert in West Palm Beach, Curtis in Fort Lauderdale.

According to latest information Lt. Comdr. Bailey Sory is with the Navy, and is now stationed in New Orleans. Lt. Comdr. Robert Sory is also with the Navy and is stationed at the Naval Air Base in Miami. Lt. Curtis Sory is on foreign duty with the Marines.

Reginald Bedell Reported As Missing in Action

Reginald H. Bedell, Jr., '44, Pilot Officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force, is reported missing in action. He was a student in the University for one year, '40-'41, leaving after his freshman year to enlist in the air forces of his native Canada. He was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. Bedell was commissioned a pilot officer on November 9, 1942 and was sent almost immediately to England. There, in a bomber squadron of the Coastal Command, he was pilot of a Wellington bomber. At the time of his disappearance in mid-December he was engaged in flying operations over the North Sea. Nothing is known of the fate of either plane or crew.

QUINCY C. AYRES, '12, is a Lieutenant Commander in the Civil Engineering Corps of the Navy, stationed at the Navy Department in Washington, D. C. He writes that he is in charge of the Equipment Planning Division for use of the "Navy Seabees." Prior to entering the Navy Ayres was Associate Professor in the agricultural engineering department of Iowa State College.

LT. ARCH BISHOP, JR., '39, is pilot of a bomber in the Army Air Forces, stationed at the Army Air Base, Topeka, Kansas. He was co-pilot of a four-motored bomber which crashed on a peak in Northern New Mexico in November of last year, surviving the catastrophe with eight others of the crew of ten.

Lt. Comdr. B. B. Sory, '20

Lt. Comdr. J. R. Sory, '27

Lt. C. H. Sory, '29

"Tony" Griswold is Now Chaplain in the Navy

Hurlbut Anton Griswold, '28, affectionately referred to as "Tony," friend, counsellor, and often confessor to countless Sewanee students in the past twelve years, is now a priest in the Episcopal Church. He was ordained to the diaconate and the priesthood on successive days, December 20 and 21, at St. Mary's Cathedral in Memphis by the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D.D., Bishop of Tennessee.

Griswold, a native of New Britain, Connecticut, entered the University as a junior in 1926. He received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from the College in 1928 and that of Bachelor of Divinity from the Theological School in 1930. He became in the fall of that year instructor in Greek and Bible and Acting Registrar. He later took on other duties which combined to bring him into ever closer relationship with the student body. Chief of these duties were the management of the Student Union with its sandwich shop and moving picture theatre and the general supervision of the German Club and Purple Masque, student dramatic organization. So passed twelve years of faithful service to Sewanee and of intimate contact and personnel work with young men, but Griswold was never ordained to the ministry for which he had prepared himself.

With December, 1941, came the war and in September of the following year Griswold enlisted in the Navy. After a brief period of training at the Great Lakes Naval Training School, he was sent to the Naval Training School for aviation maintenance at Memphis, a second class petty officer, to be trained in the duties of cook for which post he had originally enlisted. Before very long, however, he found himself, by force of habit, practising also those other functions which had been so much a part of his Sewanee life, advising and consulting with his brother seamen.

The wheels were beginning to grind, and almost before he was aware of what was happening, Griswold suddenly realized that something long postponed was beginning to catch up with him. He found himself assigned as assistant to Chaplain Charles L. Dickey and conducting weekly classes in Bible study. Soon Chaplain Dickey, having investigated his background, was urging him to be ordained and to apply for a Chaplaincy in the Navy. Returning to Sewanee on furlough and receiving the hearty encouragement of his friends, Griswold took the necessary steps, and so, after years, "Tony" Griswold, Bachelor of Divinity of the Class of 1930, became the Rev. H. A. Griswold. On March 6, he was appointed chaplain with the rank of lieutenant. The good wishes of the Mountain end of hosts of friends among the Sewanee alumni are hereby extended to Chaplain Griswold.

In a special article from New Guinea, printed in the Nashville Banner of March 2, Lt. Alex Guerrey, '39, of Sewanee, Tenn., is mentioned as one of the crew of a Flying Fortress, just returned to base from the hazardous business of making maps in the New Guinea mountain area. A recent cable from Alex reports that all is well with him and another Sewanee flier, W. W. Hazzard, '38. Alex and Bill have been together since training days.

Sons and Grandsons of Alumni Receive Commissions

Pictures appear on this page of four recently commissioned officers in three branches of the service. They are in more than one way Sewanee's own—alumni themselves and sons and grandsons of alumni, representatives of families who are veterans in the service of Sewanee, either on her faculty or on her administrative boards.

Lt. Ephraim Kirby-Smith, U. S. Marines; B.S., class of 1942; graduated high in his class at Quantico, now on active duty at San Diego; son of Ephraim Kirby-Smith, '06, grandson of Gen. Edmund Kirby-Smith, professor of mathematics in the University, 1875-1892.

Lt. Charles Juhan, U. S. Army Reserve; a graduate of the Academy, a member of the class of '46; now in training at Camp Wheeler, Georgia; son of the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, '11, member of the Board of Regents of the University.

Ensign Theodore D. Bratton, U. S. Naval Reserve; B.A., class of 1942; graduate of the Naval Reserve Training School, Columbia University, now on active duty with the Navy; son of the late Rev. W. D. Bratton, '13, grandson of the Rt. Rev. T. D. Bratton, D.D., '87, one-time Chancellor of the University.

Ensign Currin R. Gass, U. S. Naval Reserve; B.S., class of 1942; graduate of the Naval Reserve Training School, Annapolis; at present studying Diesel engines at Pennsylvania State College; son of Professor Henry M. Gass, '07, grandson of Rev. John Gass, '78, deceased.

RUPERT COLMORE, JR., recently received his commission as Ensign in the U.S. Naval Reserve. He is at present in New York, attending Naval Training School. His father is Dr. Rupert Colmore, '05, of Chattanooga.

CLAYTON LEE BURWELL, '32, received his commission as Lieutenant (jg) in the U.S. Naval Reserve in November, 1941. On February 6 of this year, he was married to Miss Deloise Ann Emmons.

ENSIGN T. D. BRATTON, '42

ENSIGN CURRIN GASS, '42

STANYARNE BURROWS, JR., '29, enlisted in the United States Army on December 29, 1942. He is at present stationed at Camp Sibert, Ala.

GREEN BENTON, JR., '24, too young for World War I, could not resist the call of World War II. He left business and family to enter the Army Air Forces in May, 1942. He has the rank of Captain and is stationed at the Army Air Base, Pueblo, Colo.

J. F. (JENKS) GILLEM, '14, has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He is still with the Third Air Force, stationed at Tampa. Passing nearby last fall on a tour of inspection, he de'oured via Sewanee and tarried long enough to greet his good friends on the Mountain.

EARL BEARDEN, '42, captain of Sewanee's last varsity football team, who left the University in the middle of his senior year to enter the Army, is according to latest information, with the Army Air Force at Scott Field, Ill. He was married October 18 to Miss Sarah Estes of Franklin, Ky.

ROBERT L. CAMORS, '36, is a Lieutenant in the U.S. Coast Guard, stationed at Baton Rouge. He enlisted as an apprentice seaman in May, 1941, and was commissioned Ensign in September of the same year. He was married in December, 1941, to Miss Lorraine Bourgeois and according to a letter in January, 1942, he is the proud father of a son, who is already slated for Sewanee.

G. BOWDOIN CRAIGHILL, JR., '36, Lieutenant (jg) in the U.S. Naval Reserve, survived the sinking of the Cruiser Atlanta in the battle of the Solomons, November 13, 1942. When last heard from, he was in the Southern Pacific area, recovering from malaria. His father is G. Bowdoin Craighill, '03, an attorney in Washington, D. C.

ROBERT V. BODFISH, '41, is a Lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Air Corps, stationed at present in Atlanta. He is to be married in the near future to Miss Jeanne Marie Stephenson. Lt. Bodfish was a recent visitor to the Mountain, tarrying long enough to go to Chapel and to renew old acquaintances.

EDMUND C. ARMES, '13, is a Major in the Army Air Corps, on foreign duty since midsummer 1942. The Vice-Chancellor received a much censored letter from the Major from which it much could be inferred, that he was aboard ship somewhere, headed some where, and liking it very much.

JAMES O. BASS, '31, is Captain in the Judge Advocate General's Department, U.S. Army, on duty at Camp Adair, Ore. After leaving Sewanee, he graduated from Harvard Law School. Since 1934, he has been practicing law in Nashville, having served one term in the State House of Representatives and one term in the State Senate.

Sewanee Selected for Navy College Training Program

First Contingent of 300 Arrives July 1

College Calendar to Coincide with Navy Schedule

On July 1 of this year the University of the South will become one of the many colleges and universities throughout the country participating in the Navy College Training Program, designated the V-12 program. Official notice of Sewanee's selection by the Navy was received by the Vice-Chancellor on March 23. Three hundred and six students will be Sewanee's quota, all to report on July 1. In this number will be included the Sewanee students at present enlisted in the old V-1 and V-7 programs of the Navy. The status of the Marine Reserve has not at this date been finally determined, and it is therefore uncertain what will be the final disposition of the twenty or more Marine Reservists in the present student body.

The calendar for the Navy program will be three semesters of sixteen weeks per year, beginning on July 1, November 1, and March 1. The calendar of the college will correspond to that of the Navy program since Navy students will be enrolled, at least in the early stages of the program, in the regular college classes and civilian students may take classes in the Navy program. The calendar of the Theological School will remain unchanged. Commencement will be celebrated each year on the second Monday in June. The Board of Regents and the Board of Trustees will meet as usual at Commencement, as will the Associated Alumni.

The new Navy V-12 program includes three curricula: basic, engineering, and pre-medical. Sewanee's part in the program will be the basic curriculum for the collegiate training of deck officers for the Navy. This basic curriculum, as it has been outlined, will last for four consecutive semesters of sixteen weeks and its content will be: for the first year, English, mathematics, American history, physics, Naval history and organization, engineering, drawing, and physical education; for the second year, mathematics, physics, chemistry, psychology, naviga-

Campaign for Living Endowment Progresses Despite Difficulties

The central office of the campaign for the Living Endowment at Sewanee reports definite progress within the past two months. To the list of one hundred and fifteen communities in which organized campaigns are being conducted, four more are to be added with their chairmen:

NEW MEXICO

Santa Fe—Rev. C. J. Kinsolving, III

NEW YORK

Rochester—Thomas E. Hargrave

SOUTH CAROLINA

Columbia—Dr. LeGrand Guerry

TEXAS

Fort Worth—J. Morgan Aiken

Of the one hundred and nineteen chairmen, forty have already made reports, of which twenty-five are final. The great majority of the others are working and encouraging reports are being received daily. In some cases, for very good reasons, campaigns have been postponed. These reasons are sometimes purely local, but more often national, such as income tax, war bond sales, or Red Cross drives. The campaign has, of course, lost some of its momentum because of the illness of the Vice-Chancellor and the absence of the dynamic force of his vital personality. It is generally true, however, that chairmen have risen valiantly to their responsibility and the enforced absence of the leader has fired the lieutenants to greater individual effort. The campaign is the job of no one man; it is a corporate alumni effort. In that spirit, alumni are responding with their labor and their means.

Besides the organized communities, there are, in addition, two other great sources of Sewanee strength, alumni in the smaller unorganized towns who number a thousand or more and alumni in the service whose addresses are known, also about one thousand. Letters and literature about the campaign have been mailed to both of these groups and the response has been immediate and gratifying.

In this last group are to be found most of the younger alumni. Older

Class of Thirty-Nine to be Graduated with Usual Ceremonies

The seventy-fifth annual Commencement of the University will be celebrated with due form and ceremony from June 2 to June 7. The program of events is printed elsewhere in these pages. The Board of Regents will begin its sessions on Wednesday, June 2, followed on Friday, June 4, by meetings in the morning and afternoon of the Board of Trustees. On Friday evening, the social calendar opens with the Vice-Chancellor's reception. The other events will follow as usual on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

The University is especially honored this year in having as guest speakers two distinguished gentlemen who have on various occasions and in many ways shown themselves true friends of Sewanee.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached at the service on Commencement Sunday by the Rev. Everett Holland Jones of San Antonio, Bishop-elect of the Diocese of West Texas. The Rev. Mr. Jones is a native Texan, a Bachelor of Arts of the University of Texas and a Bachelor of Divinity of the Virginia Theological Seminary. With the exception of one year, 1938, in which he was Canon of the Washington Cathedral, he has spent his entire ministry in Texas at churches in Cuero, Waco, and San Antonio. He has been rector of St. Mark's Church, San Antonio, since 1938.

The Commencement address will be delivered on Monday, Commencement Day, by Dr. Robert McDonald Lester of New York City. Dr. Lester is a native of Alabama, a Bachelor of Arts of both Birmingham-Southern and Vanderbilt, and a Master of Arts of Columbia University. He has had conferred on him by different universities the honorary degrees of Doctor of Letters, Doctor of Civil Law, and Doctor of Laws. Dr. Lester has a long and distinguished career as teacher and administrator both in Southern schools and colleges and at Columbia University. In 1926 he became assistant to the President of the Carnegie Corporation and since 1934 has been secre-

Maurice Moore Appointed
Acting Organizing Secretary

The NEWS takes pleasure in introducing to the general body of the alumni the new Acting Organizing Secretary, Maurice A. Moore, Jr., '23, who has accepted the appointment of Frank Gillespie, President of the Associated Alumni, to this post left vacant by the resignation of Gordon Clark, now in the Navy. Mr. Moore is Assistant Professor of English at the University, a position he has held since 1931. He is well known to many generations of Sewanee alumni not only because of his student associations and his twelve years as a member of the faculty, but also because of the fact that he is at present serving the Associated Alumni as Recording Secretary.

THE ALUMNI FUND

The first report on the status of the Alumni Fund will not be published until the summer issue of the NEWS, returns being as yet too incomplete. At this stage, however, it is well to call the attention of the alumni to certain facts connected with this fund.

The fiscal year of the University closes on August 31. Contributions to the University either in fulfillment of pledges made or as new gifts for the current year should be paid, if possible, before that date.

The campaign for the Living Endowment, of which the Alumni Fund is a most important part, is now under way. The last year of the Sustaining Fund, which runs out this year, becomes, for purposes of continuity, the first year of the Living Endowment. Alumni in communities where organized campaigns are being conducted will be called upon by local committees. Others are urged to assume their proper share in this movement and make their contributions by mail. Blank forms for this purpose have been generally distributed.

The Alumni Fund was never of more vital significance to Sewanee. In the current year the income of the University from student fees has been greatly reduced and a probable deficit of $70,000 must be made up. In the war years the University fully intends to maintain its liberal arts program. In the post-war years Sewanee faces her great opportunity of assuming more and more a place of leadership in

The University To Maintain
Its Liberal Arts Program

With the coming of the Navy, the University finds itself confronted with the very serious problem of maintaining its integrity as a college of Liberal Arts, and of resisting the temptation of following the line of least resistance and becoming a mere adjunct of the Navy's educational program. Without minimizing the seriousness of the task of ministering to the various needs of 300 prospective young officers in our midst, a task that Sewanee must and will perform well, there is every reason for fighting a good fight for the integrity of the college.

The first and foremost reason is the continuity of the Sewanee tradition. A break of five years or more in that continuity will be fraught with great seriousness. It is easier and better to continue the liberal arts process than to revive it after an interim. Sewanee's past, present, and future are inevitably bound up with that tradition. It is the service Sewanee has rendered best and is qualified to render best. Sewanee stands or falls with the liberal arts.

A second reason, equally valid, is that Sewanee can render its best service to the Navy and to the country at war by endeavoring to make the Sewanee impact in the years immediately ahead on the Navy contingent. Sewanee must not become a Navy School; the Navy must come to Sewanee. Harry Cain, Mayor of Tacoma, writes: "I find it difficult to think of Sewanee as a place through which ships of all sizes are likely soon to ply. In a strange world, however, strange things are certain to happen. I am rather inclined to believe that the very best of sailors will result from what they learn on your Mountain Top." For the reason that Harry Cain expresses so well, Sewanee must be Sewanee for what it can give to our sailor guests in our midst, and Sewanee is Sewanee only if Sewanee maintains her integrity as a college of liberal arts.

A third reason, certainly no less valid, is Sewanee's clear responsibility from year to year to a continuing group of students who belong to Sewanee by every right. This group according to present calculation should range from 75 to 100 students: freshmen who have from one to two years of college life before they are subject to the draft; students who are deferred because they are preparing for such necessary professions as the ministry, medicine, and scientific research; and students who for physical reasons are exempt from the draft. The cause of such students is well put by a father who recently wrote Dean Baker concerning the entrance of his son into the University. Colleges, he said, are fast being turned into army camps where the civilian student is at best tolerated and allowed to find what place he can on the periphery. Will Sewanee, of which he has heard so much and of which he hopes so much, continue to be a college where the young student in the few precious semesters at his disposal may still become aware of the dignity and the worth of pure learning?

Surely, for all these reasons, Sewanee must not sell out. Surely, friends and alumni of the institution will aid the University of the South in the laudable endeavor to be one college where the gown will not resign to the uniform, where the college and the Navy program will proceed side by side with mutual respect and cooperation. Such undoubtedly is the desire of the Navy: to bring for a period of four semesters its prospective officers under the influence of that very genuine and vital thing, the spirit and the intellectual and moral discipline of a great college. So, undoubtedly, Sewanee will make her best contribution and instead of a stream of detached individuals who sojourn for a time in our midst, Sewanee may well make many a loyal friend and alumnus who in the years to come will think with pride and pleasure of happy, profitable, and inspiring months spent on this mountain.

Sewanee Review Celebrates
Its Fiftieth Anniversary

The Sewanee Review, celebrating this year its fiftieth anniversary, enters upon a new chapter in its long and honorable career as the oldest literary quarterly in the South. Under new management the Review, founded in 1892, will definitely expand its editorial policy in order more fully to realize its end as a "Quarterly of Life and Letters."

The Acting Editor is Tudor S. Long, Head of the Department of English; Managing Editor, Andrew Lytle, Assistant Professor of History. The Associate Editors are John Donald Wade, Head of the Department of English at the University of Georgia; Cleanth Brooks, Jr., literary critic, former Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, and now Associate Professor of English at Louisiana State University; W. B. C. Watkins, former Rhodes Scholar, later on the faculty at Princeton, and now the holder of a Huntington Library fellowship; Gilbert E. Govan, Librarian of the University of Chattanooga and Literary Editor of the Chattanooga Times.

The Managing Editor, Professor Lytle, is a member of the Fugitive-Agrarian group of poets and writers, and has held one of the much coveted Guggenheim fellowships. Besides contributing to the Agrarian-Distributist symposia, I'll Take My Stand and Who Owns America?, he has written a biography, Bedford Forrest and His Critter Company, two novels, The Long Night and At the Moon's Inn, and several interesting short stories. He has stated his policy as follows:

"The Sewanee Review prints articles, essays, poems, and fiction. It does not limit the subject matter, except in so far as it prefers material which represents critical treatment of our cultural inheritance. It numbers among its contributors men of letters, scholars, and young men who show talent but have not yet established themselves."

The January-March, 1943, number of the Review contains, in addition to

The Vice-Chancellor Resumes Duties of His Office

The Vice-Chancellor, after three months of illness and rather gradual convalescence, is once more to be seen in his office, in his seat at Chapel, and in the many places into which his manifold duties call him. The verdict of the doctors is that he will be entirely well again and that with reasonable care he may soon resume the full burden of his responsibilities. For the past four years, without thought of himself, Dr. Guerry has given to Sewanee every ounce of his thought, his strength, and his energy. There were so many things to be accomplished and, as he with fine prevision realized, the time was short. Sewanee must be made as strong as possible to face any crisis that might come. That he won his fight for Sewanee, Sewanee men everywhere know full well. But the price had to be paid, the price of a serious illness. Fortunately, the price was not too high. Dr. Guerry has returned to the helm, a wiser man from the lesson of his illness but the same vigorous leader. Sewanee men everywhere will thank God for his recovery and pray for God's blessing on him as he carries on Sewanee's fight for Christian liberal culture.

BISHOP CAPERS, FORMER CHANCELLOR, DIES IN SAN ANTONIO

The Rt. Rev. William Theodotus Capers, D.D., Bishop of West Texas, died at his home in San Antonio on March 29. Bishop Capers, though never a student in the University, had long and intimate connections with Sewanee and was well known on the Mountain. He became an honorary alumnus in 1914 when on the occasion of his election to the Episcopate the University conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. During his twenty-nine years as Bishop, he was a member of the Board of Trustees and was ever willing to serve the interests of Sewanee in his diocese. Last year, on the death of Bishop Mikkell, Bishop Capers, as the senior bishop on the Board of Trustees, served as Chancellor of the University from February until the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees in June, when Bishop Maxon was elected Chancellor. Other connections with Sewanee came through his father, the Rt. Rev. Ellison Capers, Bishop of South Carolina, Chancellor of the University from 1904 until 1907; a brother, Frank Capers, who was a student at Sewanee in the early '80's, and another brother, the Rev. Walter B. Capers, D.D., an honorary alumnus of the year 1917.

S.A.E. Reunion, Scheduled For This Year, Postponed

At the request of Morey Hart, '34, the News hereby extends word to the members of the S.A.E. fraternity that the reunion scheduled for this Commencement has been indefinitely postponed. The reasons for this postponement will be obvious to all concerned.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD IN HONOR OF CRAWFORD JOHNSON

All Saints' Chapel was the scene on May 4th of a beautiful memorial service to the late Crawford Toy Johnson of Birmingham, Ala. All Sewanee gathered at the noon Chapel hour to pay tribute to this generous friend of the University who in recent years has been the source of many benefactions to the University and who, with Mrs. Johnson, was the donor of Johnson Hall. The choir as always contributed no small share of beauty to the service by its fine rendition of the hymns and especially of the anthem, The Lord's Prayer, by Malotte.

Mrs. Crawford Johnson came from Birmingham to be present at the service and with her were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jemison of the same city.

Speakers at the service were Vice-Chancellor Guerry, Vice-Chancellor Emeritus Finney, and the Rev. John Turner, rector of the Church of the Advent, Birmingham. All paid high tribute to Mr. Johnson and through him to the long line of benefactors of the University who, like Mr. Johnson, live on in lives made better not only by their generous gifts to Sewanee but also by the influence and the example of their lives.

Dr. Guerry's opening address, which we print herewith, struck the keynote of this very impressive service.

"Faith in an undertaking is the source of its power. When Bishop Leonidas Polk laid the cornerstone of the University of the South, he and his comrades had faith in the institution which they were creating. Vision had fashioned the plan of a Christian University. Faith in the enterprise had brought the dream to reality. And since that day faith in the University of the South, confidence in the intrinsic merit of its work and its mission has sustained the University through the years of its struggle to survive and to fulfill the purpose of its being.

"Faith in Sewanee and in her ideals is the foundation of her strength. The unfaltering and unflinching faith of men and women in this University and in its lofty principles has been the power that has guarded it against destruction, saved it from disaster, brought to it, time after time, the dawn of a brighter day, and led it to distinguished achievement and fine service to the nation—faith and devotion, loyalty and courage that go with faith and that faith begets.

"We pay tribute today to a man who had faith in Sewanee's philosophy of education, in Sewanee's program, and in Sewanee's mission. He believed in this University. He felt deeply that the hope of America lay in institutions like Sewanee, provided they were true to their ideals.

"Evidence of that faith is Johnson

Some of these days, the war will be over, the boys will be back, and the Mountain will once more be host to alumni returning at Commencement. Lt. Morey Hart is serving in the Navy and will be there as long as his services are needed, but he gives notice to the boys that he is still chairman of that Reunion Committee and that the reunion is postponed, not called off.

COMMENCEMENT PLANS

Registration

Returning alumni are asked to report to the Alumni Office (third entry, Walsh Hall) for registration and room assignment as soon as possible after their arrival on the Mountain.

The Alumni Office will maintain an information desk from Wednesday, June 2, through Commencement Day. Tickets for the alumni dinner will be on sale.

Accommodations

Ambler Hall will be reserved for men. The first floor of the Sewanee Inn and Van Ness Hall will be reserved for married couples. Reservations may be made through the Alumni Office.

Meals may be had at Magnolia Hall. There will be a charge of fifty cents for each meal.

Memorial Tablets to be Erected In All Saints' Chapel

The gift of friends and alumni, a memorial tablet will be dedicated on Sunday, June 6, to the Rt. Rev. William Alexander Guerry, D.D., M.A., '84, Chaplain of the University from 1893 to 1907, and Bishop of South Carolina from 1907 until his death in 1928, who launched the project of All Saints' Chapel and brought it to its present state of completion.

The Associated Alumni will dedicate on Saturday, June 5, a tablet in memory of the Rt. Rev. Albion Williamson Knight, D.D., of the Class of 1880, Vice-Chancellor of the University from 1913 to 1922. Formerly Bishop of Cuba, he was Bishop Coadjutor of New Jersey at the time of his death in 1936.

Hall, one of the most beautiful buildings in Sewanee or on the campus of any college, the gift of Mr. Johnson and his wife who shared and inspired his interest in this University. Further evidence of that faith was his magnificent contribution each year to the support of the University, and his recent generous bequest to this institution. For all of this, we are very grateful.

"But more grateful are we in that a person of the character of Crawford Toy Johnson held this University in such high regard and had such confidence in its future. For Crawford Toy Johnson was one of the finest men of our time. He was unselfish and good. He was extraordinarily thoughtful and considerate. He was able in the performance of every duty and honorable in every relationship. He possessed to a rare degree the qualities of firmness and tenderness which always combine to make for manliness. He had a keen sense of responsibilities as a citizen. He placed the common good of his community and his nation first in his life. He considered his wealth a trusteeship, an opportunity and an obligation for the happiness and welfare of others.

"We salute today his memory and the memory of all those friends and benefactors whose spirits like his hover about us and challenge us to fight the good fight for Sewanee and America through these dangerous and trying days and to keep the faith to the end."

tion and nautical astronomy, and physical education.

In regard to the initial phase of this program, the Navy's official statement of this date is as follows: "Of the students assigned to colleges and universities on or about July 1 approximately 80 per cent will be students now in college who are enlisted in Class V-1 or V-7 or hold probationary commissions in the U. S. Naval Reserve or are enlisted in the Marine Corps or Coast Guard Reserve or in the Army Enlisted Reserve with Navy preference." It is inferred that Sewanee, as a Naval school, will be assigned only Naval students from the above categories. Such students will be allowed from one to four semesters in college, the number of semesters varying according to the present advancement of a student. Only those with seven semesters completed will be allowed time to graduate. All others will be allowed a maximum total of seven semesters and a minimum total of five semesters. They will not be required to take the basic V-12 curriculum outlined above but will be allowed to pursue their previously chosen major interests, with the single proviso that their college course include freshman mathematics and general physics, and with the suggestion that students include in their program of study any courses in the basic curriculum which they have not taken.

The Navy states further that the remaining 20 per cent will be a relatively small group of freshmen who will enter under the new V-12 program and be required to take the basic program above outlined. All students will be in the same military status, details of which have not been received and which the Navy will itself administer. The requirements of the program will be very exacting: fifty-eight hours a week of class-room work and periods of preparation, exclusive of the time devoted to drill and physical education.

It will be seen from the above statement that for a time at least the curriculum of the college will be to a degree normal, as the college continues to serve the needs of those advanced students, 80 per cent of the initial assignment, who are now enlisted in the various Navy programs. Thereafter, the curriculum will be more largely restricted to the Navy's basic program. Sewanee's hopes and plans for the continuance of its traditional liberal arts program are discussed elsewhere in these columns.

It is indeed gratifying that the University will be assigned those of its own students now enlisted in the V-1 and V-7 programs. The presence of such a nucleus of Sewanee students will be a great help in the transition and in the process of indoctrinating the incoming Navy personnel into the Sewanee way of life.

As the program develops, many adjustments will have to be made by the faculty of the college. The languages, the social sciences, with the exception of specialized courses in history, and biology will be taken only by those students in the University not in the Navy program. The number of these students, which cannot now be forecast, will necessarily be small. Therefore faculty members teaching the above subjects will find themselves sharing the burden of the more heavily loaded departments, according to the qualifications they may have outside of their regular fields.

Sewanee is in process of change, change rendered necessary by the demands of war. To these changes Sewanee is ready and willing to adapt herself, proud that she is privileged to make a contribution to the war effort, and determined that this contribution shall be in every sense a worthy one.

Seventy-Fifth Commencement, June 2-7

tary of that foundation. In this last capacity, he has on more than one occasion been helpful in securing grants for the University.

The graduating class in the college this year numbers fifty-six. Of these, seventeen were awarded their degrees at the Commencement exercises in February. The remaining thirty-nine will be graduated at the coming ceremony on June 7. Of these, twenty-one are in the Navy Reserve, eleven are in the Army Reserve, and two are in the Marine Reserve. They will be sent shortly after graduation to Officers' Training School. Three members of the class will enter theological school, one will go into chemical warfare, and one is at present not certain of his future plans. Six members of the class have been initiated into membership in Phi Beta Kappa.

The Latin Salutatory for the class will be delivered by Mr. Edwin Greenville Seibels of Columbia, South Carolina. The Valedictory will be delivered by Mr. David Browning Collins of Hot Springs, Arkansas.

In the theological school, the class will consist of eleven members, all of whom completed their work in December and are now serving parishes and missions in various parts of the country.

Honorary degrees have been awarded as follows: Doctor of Civil Law—Dr. Robert M. Lester, the Commencement orator; Doctor of Science—Dr. Edward C. Ellett, '88, distinguished oculist of Memphis, Tennessee, and Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, III, Armored Force, U. S. Army; Doctor of Divinity—the Rt. Rev. Duncan M. Gray, '25, Bishop of Mississippi; the Very Rev. Raimundo deOvies, '60, dean of St. Philip's Cathedral, Atlanta, Georgia; the Rev. Henry Clark Smith, '15, rector of All Saints' Church, Riverside, California; and the Rev. Everett H. Jones, the Commencement preacher.

In view of the difficulties of transportation and the exigencies of war, it is not anticipated that the usual gala crowd will assemble on the Mountain. In the conviction, however, that four years of college life merit, in any time and especially in time of war, a dignified and fitting close, the University, for the sake of this very representative graduating class, will neither abolish nor in any way slight this approaching Commencement.

There will be no special fraternity reunion, the reunion planned by the S.A.E. fraternity for this year having been called off. On Sunday afternoon, however, visiting and resident members of the various fraternities will meet as usual at their respective chapter houses for a social hour. The dances will certainly not be as usual. The student body, already greatly reduced in size, has recently been further diminished by the calling of the Army reservists, and the question of expense will have the effect of making them comparatively simple affairs. They will, however, be held as usual on Saturday and Monday evenings.

Saturday will be Alumni Day and, though only a small number of alumni may be on hand, every function of that day will be observed: Corporate Communion at 7:30 a.m., the annual meeting of the Associated Alumni at 9:45 a.m., and the banquet at 6:45 p.m. at Tuckaway. The memories of past gatherings will not be forgotten as those present plan for other gatherings in better years to come.

alumni may sometimes wonder what the impact of Sewanee is on the younger generation. Robert G. Snowden, '40, Captain in the United States Marine Corps, leaves little doubt on this point. Writing to Dr. Guerry from the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, he says:

"Delighted to receive your letter concerning the Living Endowment and it gives me great pleasure to know that I can be of some real material aid to Sewanee during this dark period. I honestly believe that every true Sewanee man in the service feels that he should contribute to the Alumni Fund and I personally would have felt slighted if I hadn't been asked to help."

eleven short poems and one short story, a brilliant interpretation of Coleridge's 'Christabel'; a penetrating criticism of the Church's indifference to the Liberal Arts tradition in education as opposed to the present-day elective system; a revealing appreciation of some of Louis MacNeice's poems; Dr. Guerry's timely and valuable essay, 'War and Liberal Arts Education'; an explanation of Dr. W. P. DuBose's religious philosophy as a Christian development of Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics; a keen exposé by a new Sewanee professor of Bertrand Russell's false reasoning in one of his recent essays, 'Non-Materialistic Naturalism'; and book reviews of poetry, fiction, biography, and history.

On the Mountain

Fraternities Suspended Until the War Ends

At a recent called meeting of the Pan-Hellenic Council, at which were present faculty advisers of all fraternities, a momentous step was taken. Fraternities were suspended for the duration. The action was taken without a dissenting voice. Dr. Guerry announced for the University that he would enter into a contract with accredited representatives of the various fraternities to rent their properties, with the guarantee that they would be returned to the fraternities at the proper time in good condition. Details of the contract are not now available. The houses will serve various purposes—recreation centers, Navy headquarters, and residences.

Fraternities have had a long and honorable record for the sixty-five years of their presence at Sewanee. Feelings in regard to them are deep and lasting, so much so that all of those present at the meeting were reluctant to take the step to suspend their operation for even a short period of time. The difficulties of the transition, however, coupled with the fact that most of the chapters may have no representatives in the University after June and the further fact that the personnel of the student body will of necessity be constantly and swiftly changing, made any other course of action seem entirely unreasonable. Charters will not be withdrawn from the Sewanee chapters but will be considered by the headquarters of the various fraternities as in an inactive status until such time as conditions seem to warrant a return to active operation.

CAP AND GOWN NOT TO BE PUBLISHED THIS YEAR

For the first time in many years the Cap and Gown will not be published. The reasons will be apparent: the reduced student body, the consequent irregularity in many student activities, and the difficulty of financing an annual. A record of the year will, however, be published in the form of a sixteen-page bound pamphlet issued as a supplement to the Purple. Grenville Seibels of the class of '43, editor of this booklet, plans to present in it as comprehensive a story as possible in picture and in print of this year's activities in the University. The booklet will be printed at the University Press and according to present plans will appear at Commencement. It will be mailed to all members of the student body of this year and to all alumni in the service. The Alumni Office sends the booklet to the last named group in the belief that this vivid picture of the Sewanee of 1943 will give pleasure to all our Sewanee soldiers, sailors, and airmen, and especially to those who find themselves serving in far-away lands.

Varsity Track Team

PHI BETA KAPPA INITIATES SIX SENIORS, TWO JUNIORS

Members of the class of 1943 who have been initiated into Phi Beta Kappa are David Browning Collins of Hot Springs, Ark.; Charles Herrick Knickerbocker of Philadelphia, Pa.; Henry Frederick Seaman of Amarillo, Texas; Mercer Logan Stockell of Donelson, Tenn.; John Henry Yochem of San Antonio, Texas, and Edwin Grenville Seibels of Columbia, S. C.

Two members of the class of 1944 have been initiated in their junior year: Gus Lafayette Baker of Winchester, Tenn., and Harry Morris Claiborn Hewson of Charlotte, N. C.

Earl Abell, Former Coach, Visits Sewanee

Alumni and more especially football players of the years 1919 and 1920 will be interested to know that former Coach Earl C. Abell returned after twenty-five years to pay a visit to Sewanee this winter. Ordered by his doctor to rest and recuperate from a severe heart attack, he thought of the peace and quiet of the Mountain and, comfortably ensconced at Tuckaway, found it so much to his liking that he paid an extended visit. He found many old friends and acquaintances, including Hec Clark, who played end on his 1919 team, and the veteran Willie Six. Willie's ministrations, so well known to generations of Sewanee football players, were immediately called into service, and their efficacy was such that Coach Abell left Sewanee a much improved man. Abell, after leaving Sewanee, had a long coaching career which took him successively to Mississippi State, Colgate, and the University of Virginia. For the past several years he has been in business, being at present in the employ of the American Can Company of Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Competition Is Strenuous in Spring Sports

In spite of war and the depletion of the student body by the call to service, the intramural athletic program continues with no diminution of zeal and rivalry. Winners in the major sports to date have been: football, Phi Delta Theta; track, Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The baseball season is now in full swing and from all indications a new champion will be crowned. Some of the fraternities because of lack of manpower have combined; one such combination, the Kappa-Delts (Kappa Alpha and Delta Tau Delta), is a serious contender for honors.

Intercollegiate competition continues on a small scale in tennis, golf, and track. The tennis team has not yet entered competition but even without the stars of other years is expected to give a good account of itself. A very strong combination represents the University in golf and in the only engagement to date defeated Georgia Tech easily 12 to 6 on the Druid Hills course in Atlanta. Captain of the team and a senior is Jack Wetzel of Springfield, Mo. Alan Yates of the golfing Yates family of Atlanta is a key man and alternates with Wetzel as the number one man on the team. A rather strong track team composed largely of reservists has to its credit a victory over T. P. I. and a very creditable showing in a triangular meet with Alabama and Tulane. In the latter meet Sewanee took five first places and produced the high-point athlete of the meet, Critch Judd of Oak Park, Ill., who took first place in both hurdle races and tied for first in the high jump. Hunley Elebash of Pensacola won the 100-yard and the 220-yard dashes in the very creditable time of 10 seconds flat and 22.3.

About Sewanee Alumni

Dr. Edward McCrady, Sr., Celebrates Golden Wedding

In the name of the Associated Alumni, the News extends congratulations and cordial good wishes to the Rev. Edward McCrady, D.D., of the class of '88 in the College and '92 in the theological school, who recently celebrated quietly at his home in Oxford, Miss., the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage. Dr. McCrady's long and devoted ministry has carried him to South Carolina, his native state, Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi. In 1923 he became rector of St. Peter's Church, Oxford, and at the same time professor of philosophy at the University of Mississippi. This dual task he performed until his retirement in 1939.

In the midst of an active life of preaching and teaching, Dr. McCrady wrote extensively, his best known works being "Apostolic Succession and the Problem of Unity," "Where the Protestant Episcopal Church Stands," "Idealism and the New Physics," and "Reason and Revelation." His work was recognized by his Alma Mater in 1923 when he was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

It is, Dr. McCrady's rare distinction that his father before him and his son after him served the University as professors of biology, Dr. John McCrady from 1877 to 1882 and Dr. Edward McCrady, Jr., from 1937 to the present time.

Kenneth Lyne Renews Old Acquaintances on Mountain

Kenneth MacDonald Lyne, C. E. of the class of 1909, paid a flying visit to the Mountain in April and was welcomed, after an absence of some years, by many friends and acquaintances. Quarterback on the 1906, 1907, and 1908 teams, he has a place among Sewanee's immortals for a famous touchdown return of a punt in the closing moments of the Vanderbilt game of 1908, which ended in a 6-6 tie. From 1914 to 1916, Lyne was the acting assistant professor of engineering in the University and made a survey of the University domain. He was pleased to find that his map was still of service to Dr. Finney, who is writing a history of the domain. Lyne, a native of Henderson, Kentucky, is at present living in Nashville, working for Eisele and Company, where he is associated with two other alumni who made their mark in Sewanee athletics of the early 1900's: Logan C. Eisele, '07, president of Eisele & Company, of football and baseball fame, and Eric Cheape, '10, guard on Sewanee's famous championship team of 1909.

THE REV. H. NEVILLE TINKER, for the past six years rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Providence, R. I., became rector of St. Paul's Church in Chicago, Ill., on May 1. He and Mrs. Tinker, who before her marriage was Miss Jessie Hatfield, have two sons. Their Chicago address will be 4827 Kenwood Ave.

Abbott Martin Reviews John Whitaker's New Book

John Whitaker, '27, distinguished foreign correspondent and journalist, author of And Fear Came and The Americas to the South, has recently published a new volume, We Cannot Escape History, judged by critics and friends generally as his best work. John is now on a special assignment somewhere in the North African theatre of war. His good friend, Professor Abbott C. Martin of the department of English at the University, has been good enough to review for the News We Cannot Escape History. His review follows.

After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the Congress of the United States repealed the law which prohibited the sending of American troops out of the Western Hemisphere. Very timely action, everyone will agree. To future generations, this law, along with the Johnson Act and the Neutrality Act, will be an astonishing revelation of the political immaturity and lack of realism of the pre-war period. In the years leading up to the war, America had two possible choices: she could assume her obvious responsibilities, neglected since the days of Woodrow Wilson, and work with the other democracies to check aggression; or she could bury her head in the sand and become the surprised object of prey and exploitation at the hands of peoples as merciless as they were powerful.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor brought people to their senses. They knew then what had to be done, but in their reflective moments wondered how it was that America had been so unrealistic. Finding themselves in a theatre "busy with an action far advanced," most Americans, like Wordsworth during the French Revolution, were "unprepared with needful knowledge." In Mr. John Whitaker's book, We Cannot Escape History, we luckily possess what Wordsworth lacked:

A chronicle that might suffice to show
Whence the main organs of the public power
Had sprung, their transmigrations, when and how Accomplished, giving thus unto events
A form and body.

Mr. Whitaker does just that; he gives to events a form and body. Of the tangled web of events leading up to the war, he makes an intelligible tapestry.

Mr. Whitaker, I hope, will not be offended if I call him a Liberal. A Liberal, I take it, believes that man need not be always and entirely at the mercy of fate. To some extent he can take hold of himself and his society, and with however weak a hand, partly direct his destiny. Mr. Whitaker would disdain the contention that the democratic system is inherently impotent. He makes clear his belief that freedom from recurrent wars depends ultimately upon the political good sense and maturity of the American people. Our problem is to educate the isolationists: the Lodges, the Borahs, the Lindberghs, the Wheelers—and the Chicago Tribune. His thesis is shown

Dr. John B. Elliott, of New Orleans, Dies April 14

Dr. John B. Elliott, Bachelor of Arts of the Class of 1890, Bachelor of Literature and Master of Arts of the Class of 1891, died April 14 in Birmingham, Ala. An editorial in the New Orleans Item on April 16, commenting on his death, says of Dr. Elliott: "One of the ornaments of New Orleans medicine in our time has passed away." He was a graduate of Tulane Medical School, having received the degree of M.D. from that institution in 1894. He held the chair of medicine at Tulane from 1910 to 1921, a position which his father had held before him. Tulane signalized his high attainments and service by conferring on him in 1937 the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Elliott belongs to a family distinguished in its connection with Sewanee. His grandfather, Bishop Stephen Elliott of Georgia, is revered as one of the founders. His father, Dr. John B. Elliott, came to Sewanee as professor of chemistry when the University opened in 1868 and served in that capacity until 1886; from 1878 to 1886, he was also professor of geology and mineralogy. Dr. Elliott himself was a student in the Grammar School from 1880 to 1885 and in the University from 1885 to 1891. Members of the Elliott family residing in Sewanee at present are his first cousins, Miss Charlotte Elliott and Dr. Robert W. B. Elliott, acting professor of government. Sewanee joins with New Orleans in mourning the death of her distinguished son.

H. Thom Cottam Dies at His Home in New Orleans

H. Thom Cottam, '91, died of a heart attack on April 21, at his home in New Orleans. At the time of his death, Mr. Cottam was president of the H. T. Cottam Co., of New Orleans, an export firm which was successor to a wholesale grocery firm of the same name which he liquidated in 1940. He was prominent in both business and social affairs in New Orleans and was a generous, though usually anonymous, benefactor of many charitable institutions in the city. He was a student at Sewanee from 1887 to 1889 and was a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. Though he had not visited Sewanee in many years, he maintained his connection as an alumnus both through the New Orleans Alumni Association and the Associated Alumni, and was a generous contributor to the University.

in the title of his last chapter: "Can the Isolationists Learn?"

I think it is praise enough to say of We Cannot Escape History that it is such a book as Sewanee, an alma mater knowing her children one by one, would want one of her sons to write.

Sewanee Men in Uniform

We publish below additions to the lists hitherto published of Sewanee men in uniform, the number now being more than 1,000. Thanks to tireless efforts on the part of the entire staff of the Alumni Office, to the cooperation of professors, students, and residents of the Mountain, to the parents and alumni who have been good enough to respond to our many requests for information, there is being compiled in the Alumni Office a record of the war activities of Sewanee alumni that will be invaluable for the future. Once more we repeat our request for information to all who read these columns and call attention to the form printed on page 12 of this issue.

Edmund Kirby-Smith Decorated By President of Liberia

Major Edmund Kirby-Smith, '36 U. S. Army Engineers, has been recently decorated by President Edwin Barclay of Liberia with the Order of the Star of Africa.

"Ned," as he is known to his friends, graduated from West Point in 1933, ranking number eight in a class of over four hundred. He was first sent to Panama. Then the United States lent his services to Nicaragua, where he helped to map a barge canal down the San Juan River. In the fall of 1941 he was transferred to Fort Bragg, N. C., where he was attached to a unit of Army engineers (colored), where there became famous as the "Singing Engineers." In March, 1942, he was sent with them to Liberia. He has flown much with the R. A. F.

He is the youngest son of Dr. R. M. Kirby-Smith, '95, who has been University Health Officer since 1907, and the grandson of General Edmund Kirby-Smith, C. S. A., professor of mathematics and botany in the University from 1875 to 1892. Three older brothers who preceded him in the University are either in service or in essential occupations.

Reynold M. Kirby-Smith, Jr., '27, is a First Lieutenant in the U. S. Engineers and Assistant Post Engineer at Ellington Field, Texas.

Henry T. Kirby-Smith, '27, who received his M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania with high honors in 1931, has recently been certified by the American Board of Surgery. Since 1939 he has been resident surgeon at the Emerald-Hodgson Memorial Hospital. He expected to join the Vanderbilt Medical Unit, but the Surgeon General's office decided that his services were essential in Sewanee.

John Kirby-Smith, '35, after receiving his Ph.D. in physics from Duke University, spent two years at the Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md. Since June, 1942, he has been a physicist in war work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Captain Charles Clow Killed in North Africa

Charles Clow, '29, reported on March 1 as missing in action somewhere in the North African war theatre, has since been listed as killed. No details in regard to his death have been made public. Clow, a native of Greenville, Miss., was a student in the University in 1925-26 and a member of the S.A.E. fraternity. Before the war he operated a plantation in the Mississippi Delta. A licensed pilot before the war, he entered the Royal Canadian Air Force immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities and served in the Canadian ferry command until Pearl Harbor. He then transferred with the rank of first lieutenant to the United States Army. Early this year he was promoted to the rank of Captain. He was a member of the Fourth Ferrying Command and was regarded as one of the best fliers in his organization.

ARDEN S. FREER, '41, is a first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces. He enlisted in July, 1941, was commissioned second lieutenant at Kelly Field early in 1942, and was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in April, 1943. He is now flying instructor at Laughlin Field, Del Rio, Texas.

CHARLES H. FREER, '43, is an ensign in the Naval Air Corps. He enlisted in April, 1942, and, after training at Anacostia, Corpus Christi, and Pensacola, received his commission as ensign. He is at present stationed in Miami.

The Freer brothers came to Sewanee from Washington, D. C. Their fraternity is Sigma Nu.

THOMAS R. HATFIELD, '40, is a first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, stationed at Camp Campbell, Kentucky. He enlisted in the Army in 1941, later transferring to aviation. He was commissioned second lieutenant in August, 1942, and promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in 1943. The picture of Lt. Hatfield printed on this page was taken at Sewanee in November of last year on the occasion of a flying visit to the Mountain by the lieutenant. Lt. Hatfield is the permanent president of the class of 1940. His fraternity is Phi Gamma Delta.

DONALD PALMER, '44, has just been graduated from recruit training as the honor man of his company at the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill. In January, 1943 in the course of his junior year, he left the University and enlisted as an apprentice seaman. Through a series of aptitude tests, he was selected to attend one of the Navy's aviation radioman schools. He will be sent first to one of the colleges chosen under the Navy training program for preliminary training leading up to his specialist work. Donald Palmer is the son of the late Rev. Leon C. Palmer, '09. His fraternity at Sewanee was Kappa Sigma.

Three Gillespie Brothers Serve in Armed Forces

Taking an active part in the country's war effort are the brothers Gillespie, one in the Navy, one in the Army Air Corps, and one in the Infantry. With pride and pleasure the News publishes their pictures and their military records to date.

Frank M. Gillespie, Jr., '38, Lieutenant, U. S. Naval Reserve, is now on special duty as a member of the Cuban Naval Mission. He received his commission from the first Reserve Officer Training School at Northwestern University in December, 1940, and for two years was assigned to sea patrol duty based at the Panama Canal Zone. Frank was married in December of last year to Miss Pauline Washington of Nashville, Tennessee.

James V. Gillespie, '41, Captain in the U. S. Army Air Corps, has been on duty with the Ninth Air Force, based at Cairo, Egypt, since October, 1942. He received his commission from the Navigator's School, Mather Field, Sacramento, Calif., in January, 1942. In February, 1943, he received from General Timberlake the Air Medal, the citation reading for "outstanding aerial achievement in operational flight."

George Gillespie, '46, Second Lieutenant in the infantry, is at present attending Officer Training School at Fort Benning, Ga. He received his reserve commission from the Texas Military Institute upon graduation in 1942, and after only one semester in the University he was called to active duty on February 15, 1943.

The Gillespies are sons of Frank M. Gillespie, '11, of San Antonio, Texas, President of the Associated Alumni. Their uncle, J. J. Gillespie, '15, is at present living in New York City. Father, uncle, and two sons, Frank, Jr., and James, played on the Sewanee football team. George missed the chance because of the fact that he was called into service after the first semester of his freshman year and the further fact that Sewanee had given up varsity football. All are members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Coleman Harwell Receives Commission in the Army

Coleman Harwell, '26, executive editor of the Nashville Tennessean, has been commissioned as Captain in the military government branch of the Provost Marshal General's Command, with orders to report on May 14 for training at Charlottesville, Va. He has been granted an indefinite leave of absence from his paper which he served from 1927 to 1931 and from 1937 to the present date. From 1931 to 1937, he was an executive in the editorial department of the New York World-Telegram.

Coleman Harwell has been a loyal alumnus, active at all times in all matters that pertain to the welfare of the University. His latest service to Sewanee was to serve as chairman of the campaign in Nashville for the Living Endowment which was launched at a meeting of alumni held in Nashville on May 2. According to reports received from Chairman Harwell,

VAN GILLEM APPOINTED CHIEF OF ARMORED FORCE

Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, '12, by a recent appointment, holds the high post of acting chief of the Armored Force of the United States Army. General Gillem's advancement in the department of mechanized warfare has been spectacular. From commanding officer of the 66th Infantry (light tanks) he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general on Feb. 1, 1941 and made commander of the Second Armored Brigade of the Second Armored Division. With the activation of the Third Armored (Bayou Blitz) Division in April, 1941, he was made its commanding officer and a month later was promoted to the grade of major general. Relieved of this command in January, 1942, General Gillem was named to command the newly established Second Armored Corps with headquarters at Camp Polk, La., and later at San José, Calif. He arrived at Fort Knox, Ky., on May 17, to assume his new command in which he succeeds Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers.

Sewanee is proud of General Gillem and the News extends to him, in the name of the Associated Alumni, congratulations and best wishes.

Sewanee Men Meet

In Far-Away Places

This is a global war and the armed forces of our country are covering a lot of territory, but Sewanee men run into Sewanee men and are glad to see one another and exchange news of the Mountain. Professor Lewis is recipient of a letter of recent date from regions located "South of the Equator and West of '80th Meridian." It is signed by none other than Ensign L. R. (Fluffy) Lawson, Jr., '42, USNR, who is completely disillusioned about the "beautiful island paradise of the South Pacific." The plague of flies and mosquitoes was, he writes, somewhat relieved by a meeting with Ensign Dick Kirchhoffer and Ensign Dan Scarborough at the Officers Club (such as it is). In another letter to Professor Lewis, Aviation Machinist Mate Shubael Beasley, writing also from an island in the Pacific, reports a happy meeting with Gantt Boswell.

Nashville responded generously, oversubscribing its quota. Two brothers preceded him at Sewanee, Samuel Knox Harwell, Jr., '21, and Robert Ewing Harwell, '23, both members of the firm of Neely, Harwell and Co., Nashville. The three brothers were members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Many Alumni Serve As Chaplains in Army and Navy

For the information of alumni generally, the News publishes a list of Sewanee men who, according to information received in the Alumni Office, are serving as Chaplains in the Army and the Navy. To this list we add the name of the former Chaplain at West Point, Col. C. E. Wheat, now Professor of English at West Point. This list might be considerably larger but for the fact that the quota of Chaplains assigned to the Episcopal Church has been filled for some time. For this reason many whose applications for a Chaplaincy are already in are awaiting appointment and many who desire to enter their applications have not done so.

In publishing this list, the News pays at the same time tribute to all Sewanee clergymen who yield to none in their loyalty to their Alma Mater and who throughout Sewanee's history have rendered a unique and indispensable service to the University. They are outposts all over the country for the propagation of the Sewanee idea. They are influential in sending a large proportion of students to the University. They serve on the Board of Regents and on the Board of Trustees of the University. They act as local chairmen in campaigns in their communities for the support of the University. They are influential in having Sewanee included in their parish budgets. They give generously to the support of the University.

It is not surprising, therefore, to find them ready at this grave time to enter, with other Sewanee alumni, their country's Army and Navy and to render in time of danger and suffering their service of love and healing.

The list follows:

George Witten Serves In His Fourth War

Lt. Col. George B. Witten, '13, wanderer, adventurer, soldier of fortune, veteran of four wars, is back on active duty with the Chemical Warfare Service. Col. Witten's varied career has carried him to the far ends of the world. At thirteen he ran away from home to see the world. At fourteen he served with the Imperial Light Horse in the Boer War. After many hectic experiences in South Africa, he decided to return home and get an education. After graduating from the Columbia Military Academy, he came to Sewanee where he spent one year, 1909-1910. During World War I he enlisted in the Canadian Army and rose to the rank of Major in the Royal Field Artillery. He was wounded four times. Later years found him living in New York, author of over seven hundred short stories, and popular lecturer and broadcaster on adventure and travel. In a letter to the Alumni Office he writes, "They have clipped my wings and put me in a swivel chair. This is my fourth war and the first in which I have had a desk job."

CAPT. SPIRES WHITAKER, '31, is on duty at an evacuation hospital in New Guinea. After more than a year's service in Australia, he was transferred in December, 1942, to New Guinea, where he has had a share in the establishment of eight hospitals to serve American forces on that island. He is a specialist in thoracic surgery.

George Harris Decorated For Gallantry in Action

Lt. George M. Harris, '40, was awarded in April the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action. George entered Naval aviation in 1941 and took his training at Anacostia, Jacksonville, and Miami. He received his commission at Miami in March, 1942. From information that has reached Sewanee from eye witnesses, it is certain that George has seen plenty of action and that his decoration is well earned.

WALTER GUERRY GREEN, '26, has recently been promoted to the rank of lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve. He entered the Navy with the rank of Lieutenant (jg) immediately on the outbreak of the war, at which time he was in the legal division of the Department of Agriculture. Serving in the Navy with him are two younger brothers Lt. (jg) Holt Green, '30, on duty in Washington, D.C., and Lt. Robert H. Green, '33. The three brothers are graduates of the University, holding the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Their fraternity at Sewanee was Alpha Tau Omega. Lt. Robert Green, who is serving in the Medical Corps of the Navy, was married on April 29 to Miss Audrey Greet Johnston of New York City.

NOEL CARPENTER, '40, of Decatur, Ala., won his wings in the Army Air Corps at Ellington Field, Texas, in April, 1942. He is now on foreign duty, having recently been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant.

GEORGE H. NESSELRODE, '40, of Kansas City, Kans., enlisted in the Army Air Corps in September, 1941, and won his wings at Moore Field, Texas, in May, 1942. He is now a first lieutenant, serving in a photo squadron.

ALFRED SAMS, '42, of Macon, Ga., enlisted in the Naval Air Corps during his senior year at the University. He took his preliminary training at Athens, Ga., and Memphis, Tenn. He is now an aviation cadet at the Naval Air Training Center, Pensacola, Fla.

MINTER Y. ALDRIDGE, JR., '44, of Greenwood, Miss., enlisted in the Naval Air Corps in the summer of 1942. After preliminary training in Memphis, he was sent to Pensacola, where he is now serving as an aviation cadet.

Richard Hattendorf Returns To Active Service

One of the best Sewanee stories to come out of the war concerns Lt. Richard Hattendorf, '42, reported in the last issue of the News as seriously wounded. In flying operations over the Sicilian narrows an American pilot found himself in serious trouble, with one engine and the cannon shot out, a riddled gas tank, and a broken rudder. Turning to limp back to base, an easy prey for enemy attack, the flier suddenly found himself escorted by two other American planes, one on either side. The three planes slowly made their way back in safety to their base. Arriving there, the escort planes broke radio silence and revealed to each other the brothers Hattendorf. Neither had been aware previously of the identity of the other. Their impulse had been the same: they could not leave a crippled fellow pilot at the mercy of the enemy; they saw him safely home. Lt. Wilbur Hattendorf is not a Sewanee alumnus. He showed himself made of the same stuff as his brother who is. In a recent letter to Professor Lewis, Richard reports that he has entirely recovered from his wounds and is back on active duty with his squadron. Both Richard and his brother pilot P-38's in a fighter group. In a recent Associated Press photo, Richard, already victorious in aerial combat in North Africa, is shown congratulating his brother on his first victory.

Edward Mahl Represents Sewanec in Blimp Service

As far as the records of the Alumni Office show, Ensign Edward Mahl of the class of '41 is the only Sewanee alumnus in the blimp service. He took his training at the U. S. Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., and is pilot officer of a blimp on patrol duty somewhere in Central American waters. Ensign Mahl is a nephew of Mrs. Baker, wife of Dean George M. Baker of the college faculty. He spent two years at Sewanee and was a member of the football squad. His fraternity at Sewanee was Alpha Tau Omega. Announcement has been received of his engagement and approaching marriage to Miss Marietta R. Bergston of Windsor, Conn.

LT. NOEL CARPENTER, '40

LT. GEORGE H. NESSELRODE, '40

A/C ALFRED SAMS, '42

A/C MINTER ALDRIDGE, '44

HUGHES SCHOOLFIELD, '23, is a lieutenant in the U. S. Naval Reserve. He was commissioned in August, 1942, and received training at the Harvard Naval Training School. He writes from the West Coast, "I'm most interested in my work. . . . Hope to get abroad, shore station overseas, if not on ship. However they don't move us oldsters about the way they do the youngsters." Hughes has served Sewanee well, being trustee from the Diocese of South Carolina at the time he entered the Navy.

ENSIGN GILBERT G. EDSON, '39, is the father of a daughter, Elizabeth Joy, born on April 28 at the Emerald-Hodgson Hospital at Sewanee. Ensign Edson took his Naval training at Cornell and Harvard and has been on active duty for some months on an aircraft carrier. He was at Sewanee on furlough at the time of the birth of his daughter. Mrs. Edson is the former Miss Mary Elizabeth Thompson of Winchester, Tenn.

LT. OLIVER MORGAN HALL, '39, was married on April 10 at Calvary Church, Louisville, to Miss Frances Lyon Hollaway. Lieutenant Hall left St. Luke's in the middle of his second year to enter the Army. He took his training at Fort Knox and later was commissioned there at the Armored Force Officer Candidate School. He is at present stationed at Camp Hood, Texas. His brother, the Rev. George Hall, '34, Chaplain of the University, went from Sewanee to Louisville to perform the ceremony.

GILES PATTERSON, '37, after being inducted as a private into the Army and being in short order promoted to the rank of Staff Sergeant, was sent to Officer Candidate School. On December 3rd of last year he was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant and is now serving with the Armored Force in California. On December 8 he was married to Miss Katharine Knight of Jacksonville, Fla. Mrs. Patterson is the daughter of Mr. Albion Knight, Bachelor of Arts of the Class of 1912 and trustee of the University from the Diocese of Florida.

LEWIS C. ("Squeak") BURWELL, Jr. '28, in a letter to Dr. Guerry writes of himself and his brother Clayton Lee (Teddy) Burwell, '32, as follows:

"I've battled around the States as a Captain for a year now but we're finally leaving for 'parts unknown. During this year I've by dint of much effort and importunity changed my status from ground officer to squadron leader in a troop carrier command, hauling paratroopers, air-borne infantry, etc.

"My brother Teddy, (Lieutenant, USNR), is at sea on a carrier, after doing a six months' stretch at Pearl Harbor."

The Burwell brothers came to Sewanee from Charlotte, N. C. They were members of the Sigma Nu fraternity. Teddy will be remembered as Sewanee's outstanding tennis player and last Rhodes Scholar at Oxford.

College Year and V-12 Naval Program Open July 1

Naval Contingent Adds 300 to Student Body

On July 1 the University began its new college year and its V-12 Naval training program. The period from July 1 through July 3 was devoted to registration and classification. Classes began at 8 o'clock on Monday, July 5.

Enrolled in the College are 297 Naval trainees and 50 civilian students. Approximately 125 Naval trainees are high-school graduates, 142 are transfers from colleges, and 30 are from the fleet. Of the transfer students, Southwestern contributes 45, Vanderbilt, 34, and Sewanee, 30. The civilian group is made up of freshmen under 18 and upperclassmen deferred for various reasons. There were 10 students enrolled in the summer session of the Theological School. The enrollment in the regular session which opened on September 23 is 35.

The calendar year of the College, which includes three semesters of 16 weeks each, beginning respectively on July 1, November 1, and March 1, provides for no vacations. There are brief recesses of a week between semesters and four days at Christmas.

Civilian students and Naval trainees attend classes and laboratory periods together and use the library and other facilities of the University together. Johnson, Cannon, Hoffman, and the Sewanee Inn are Naval dormitories; Tuckaway and Van Ness house the civilian students. Magnolia, renovated and enlarged, still under Mrs. Wesson's guidance, takes care of the Naval trainees. Civilian students and theologs have their meals at Tuckaway. Naval headquarters are on the first floor of the Sewanee Inn and the Sick Bay is on the first floor of Johnson Hall.

Many members of the faculty, in addition to the work in their own departments, are taking over classes and assignments in the Navy program. Dr. Yerkes of the Theological faculty and Major MacKellar are teaching mathematics; Major Gass is giving the course in Naval history; Mr. Lewis has a section of engineering drawing; Dr. McCrady is teaching physics; Mr. Hall and Mr. McConnell are working in the physics department; Dr. Buck has American history. Living Endowment Campaign Reaches Halfway Mark

The campaign for the Living Endowment, launched in February, is making sure, if somewhat slow, progress toward its goal. There are many reasons for the slowness of the progress: the illness of the Chairman, Dr. Guerri, followed by his necessary pre-occupation with the institution of the Navy program in the University; the postponement for perfectly valid reasons of an active campaign in many communities; the coming of summer which is generally regarded as an unsatisfactory time for the prosecution of a campaign. Other reasons, not so valid, have held back the campaign: procrastination on the part of local chairmen; a feeling that the security of the University has been guaranteed by the Navy program; failure to organize properly the campaign.

For the information of alumni generally the following facts are published: (1) In one-third or more of the organized communities successful campaigns have been held. (2) The halfway mark to the goal of $50,000 sought from individual subscriptions has been well passed. (3) The response from individual subscribers not in organized communities, especially from the younger alumni and from alumni in the various branches of the service, has been particularly encouraging. (4) The dioceses and parishes in the Sewanee area have accepted and will apparently pay this year more than their share of $25,000 sought in addition to the $50,000 above referred to.

According to present plans, the active prosecution of the campaign will be resumed in the fall. There is no thought on the part of any concerned that the campaign either cannot or will not reach a successful conclusion. There are so many individuals, alumni and non-alumni, who value Sewanee and the cause of liberal education that it is clearly only a matter of time and approach before the desired goal will be reached.

Those chairmen who either have not conducted campaigns or for various reasons not completed them will read with interest and encouragement for their task the following excerpt from a letter to the Vice-Chancellor written by Dudley Gale, chairman of the

Opening Service in All Saints' Chapel

[Editor's Note: The following story which appeared in the Chattanooga Times on July 9 was written by R. H. FitzGerald, '14, State News Editor of that paper, who was present for the occasion.]

The University of the South was formally opened July 8 in an impressive and colorful ceremony made more colorful by the presence of 300 uniformed apprentice seamen enrolled for basic training under the new V-12 training program which will qualify them for admission to Naval Reserve midshipmen's schools from which they will receive commissions as deck officers in the United States Navy.

The young prospective officers, carefully selected for advancement, marched into venerable, vine-clustered All Saints' Chapel for the opening service, their spotless white summer uniforms making a vivid contrast against the native sandstone buildings and the sun-dappled campus and gravel walks of Sewanee's quadrangle.

In the academic procession to the chapel walked the University's vested choir, the faculty in academic robes, the upperclassmen in cap and gown, white-clad officers of the navy, the University's youthful Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Alexander Guerri, and Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee.

A few minutes before the chapel exercises the governor inspected the navy student contingent as it stood at rigid attention on University Avenue in front of the Sewanee Union, the campus behind them dotted with civilian students, faculty members, and summer residents of the mountain.

Reviewing the unit with Gov. Cooper were Lt. David Alexander, commanding officer; Dr. Guerri; Lt. S. H. Johnston, second in command; Comdr. Russell Trout, medical officer; Dr. G. M. Baker, dean of the college; and Chief Specialist Martin M. Gezzer of the Navy.

From the inspection the navy unit marched in column to the chapel nearby to be seated in a special section. The academic procession followed, the vested male choir singing as a processional the navy hymn:

Sewanee Sacrifices

None of Essentials

Alumni far and wide no doubt find themselves wondering about Sewanee and the many things they value and love so well about their Alma Mater: liberal education, chapel, the honor code, the Sewanee spirit, the wearing of the gown, gentle manners, and all the countless things without any of which Sewanee would not be Sewanee.

For the information and assurance of alumni, the NEWS prints elsewhere in this issue as prime news the story of the acceptance by the Navy of Sewanee's Honor Code and the formal institution of the Honor Council. The preservation of the Honor Code is valuable not only in itself but is an index to the attitude of the University in regard to all its honored traditions and practises. Sewanee has not abdicated and become merely an appendage of the Navy as a unit in its educational program. The 300 Naval trainees are experiencing Sewanee as generations of Sewanee students in the past have experienced it.

Chapel is held every day as usual, compulsory for civilian students, voluntary for the Navy. Each day from thirty to fifty Navy boys are present. Navy boys sing in the choir and serve along with the civilian students.

Professors and civilian upper classmen wear the gown. The Order of Gownsmen continues its functions as custodian of the mores of Sewanee. Because of its small number, the order has relinquished for the duration its legislative and disciplinary functions in the matter of student government.

For the next two years Sewanee's normal liberal arts curriculum will continue. Thereafter, for the Navy at least, the curriculum will be more definitely limited to the required Navy program, but classes will be taught by the College Faculty and the value and dignity of liberal knowledge will not be neglected. The fate of the remainder of the curriculum will depend on the civilian students whose number is now about fifty. The place of the civilian students in the University is assured. There is entire harmony between them and the Naval trainees. As the knowledge goes abroad that at Sewanee the needs of the civilian students are as carefully provided for as ever in her history, that number will certainly increase, and the liberal arts

COMMENCEMENT HAS ALL OF ITS CUSTOMARY DIGNITY

Another Sewanee Commencement—the seventy-fifth in number—has been celebrated. It might have been a very grim Commencement, but it is not Sewanee's way to be grim at Commencement time. In every detail, with all the usual good spirit, the regular Commencement program was carried through and the unanimous verdict is that it was a most happy occasion.

The difficulties of transportation were somehow surmounted and the customary throng of visitors was on hand. Trustees and Regents rose to the occasion and made their way to the Mountain to discharge their duties as custodians of the University. Alumni, young and old, in goodly numbers found a way to come back to their Alma Mater to participate in the activities of Alumni Day. Fond parents came to rejoice with sons who were rounding out their Sewanee careers and brought with them the customary representation of the fair sex to share in the festivities.

On Commencement Sunday, the Rev. Everett H. Jones, rector of St. Mark's Church, San Antonio, and Bishop-elect of the diocese of West Texas, delivered the Commencement sermon. He chose as his text the words of our Lord: "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." It was a perfect Sewanee sermon, suitable at any time, and particularly suitable at a war-time Commencement. The direct implications for every Sewanee man were lost on none, even without Dr. Jones's own words: "What a privilege has come to you who have breathed this invigorating mountain air. It is air that quickens the soul as well as the body. And now there comes how deep a responsibility. . . . May God grant his power that we do not fail."

On Monday, Commencement Day, the address to the graduating class was delivered by Sewanee's good friend, Dr. Robert McDonald Lester, Secretary curriculum will return to its natural place of importance.

The personnel of the Navy contingent is little different from that of a normal Sewanee student body. They quickly adapt themselves to the Sewanee way of life. They are cordial, courteous, appreciative of Sewanee and the abundant opportunity afforded by the University, readily imbued with the spirit of the Mountain, in every sense good Sewanee men. Many are good Sewanee alumni in the making, having expressed their hope and their intention to return to the University after the war to complete their education.

Sewanee is not losing, she is gaining, strength from her experience with the Navy, which promises to be the testing and the strengthening of so many things that maybe we have taken too much for granted. What is worth while will survive and be stronger and more vital for the testing. What is not worth while will fail in the testing and be discarded. Sewanee will come out of the experience, purified and better armed for her task of education in the world that lies ahead.

Naval Unit Accepts Sewanee's Honor Code

In a special service held at All Saints' Chapel on August 10, Sewanee's traditional honor system, in effective operation for more than fifty years, was extended to the 300 Naval trainees of the V-12 program. The new Honor Council, elected by student vote and composed of eight representatives from the Navy, two from the civilian students, and one from the Theological School, was formally installed by the Vice-Chancellor.

The occasion carried special significance as the V-12 unit here is believed to be the first army or navy college training unit to adopt a student system which governs not only the academic work of all students, but all their acts and relationships in which the principle of integrity is involved.

Present for the installation ceremony were the three hundred trainees and the sixty civilian students of the college and the theological school, the University faculties, Lieut. D. M. Alexander, U.S.N.R., commanding officer of the navy V-12 unit at Sewanee, and residents of the community.

Members of the honor council came to the chancel steps and standing before Vice-Chancellor Guerry replied "I do" to the question, "In this chapel and in the presence of this congregation, do you solemnly promise to discharge fully and faithfully the duties and obligations of a member of the honor council of the University of the South?"

Then, kneeling, they received from Dr. Guerry their official commission in these words: "By the authority vested in me by the trustees, the faculty, and the students of this university."

ALUMNI FUND REPORT FOR YEAR ENCOURAGING

According to figures compiled from records in the Treasurer's Office, 637 alumni have contributed to the Alumni Fund for the period beginning November 15, 1942 and ending September 15, 1943, the sum of $34,816.56. These figures are particularly gratifying as they compare very favorably with past years. Only in 1940 was the number of contributors greater, 653 contributing to the Fund in that year. In 1937, 1939, 1940, and 1941 the amount contributed was greater. The current year of the Alumni Fund has, however, two more months to run and for a final comparison we must wait until November 15. Attention of alumni is called to this date and it is urged that those who have not already done so make their contribution to the Alumni Fund for the current year before November 15. The final figures with a list of the individual contributors will be published as usual in the next issue of the ALUMNI NEWS. There is no surer index of alumni cooperation and loyalty than the Alumni Fund. It will be a happy omen for the University and for the Associated Alumni if the year 1943 can show the greatest number of individual contributors to the Alumni Fund.

New Regents Elected, Kemper Williams Honored

The Board of Trustees at its meeting in June filled two vacancies on the Board of Regents, vacancies caused by the fact that the terms of office of Col. Kemper Williams, '08, chairman of the Board, and the Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers, D.D., '21, had expired. By ordinance, a member of the Board of Regents serving out a regular elected term may not succeed himself.

Taking the place of Col. Williams on the Board is Mr. J. A. Setze of Augusta, Ga., for ten years a member of the Board of Trustees from the Diocese of Georgia. Succeeding the Rev. Dr. Carruthers is the Rev. Girault M. Jones of New Orleans, an alumnus of the Class of 1928, and for the past seven years rector of St. Andrew's Church in New Orleans. The new chairman of the Board succeeding Col. Williams is Mr. Ben F. Cameron, '11, of Meridian, Miss., a member of the Board of Trustees since 1922, and a member of the Board of Regents since 1939.

In view of the generous and loyal services rendered Sewanee over a period of many years by Col. Williams, retiring chairman, the Board of Regents passed the following resolution: "With the expiration of his six-year term as a member of the Board of Regents, we who have had the privilege of association with him would pay tribute to Colonel L. Kemper Williams, to his keen sense of duty, to his outstanding worth and untiring service to the University of the South.

"As Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board, he gave freely of his time and of his well ordered talents to the fiscal progress and well-being of Sewanee.

"Later on as Chairman of the Board he served with signal ability, with wisdom, and with consideration.

"Even more Colonel Williams has been for many years a veritable tower of strength.

"His unfailing generosity and abiding loyalty have set a shining example and we know that Sewanee will continue to hold a cherished place in his heart.

"His, in all modesty, should be the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty well performed."

Vice-Chancellor Visits Two Alumni Groups

The first and only visits to alumni centers made by the Vice-Chancellor since his illness last winter were to Mobile on May 26, and to New Orleans on May 28.

In Mobile alumni who responded to the call of the Rev. Capers Satterlee, '21, were B. T. Dobbins, '16, George H. Dunlap, IV, '33, Robin C. Herndon, '09, Paul Tate, '35, Cameron Plummer, '26, and Frank Gaines, '09. Present also were the clergy of the city and various friends of Sewanee including Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Flynn whose son John is a student in the University.

In New Orleans, Dr. Guerry was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Dr. Warren Kearny, honorary alumnus and former chairman of the Board of Regents, at the St. Charles Hotel. Present at the luncheon were invited alumni, clergy and interested laymen, and two members of the University faculty, now in the service and stationed in New Orleans, Lt. Arthur Dugan, professor of Politics, and Ensign John I. H. Hodges, librarian.

In both Mobile and New Orleans, the Vice-Chancellor brought cheer to the hearts of all present by his magnificent report of things achieved in the past five years and the encouraging prospects for the immediate future of the University as a contributor to the Navy's V-12 educational program. He called at the same time on alumni, friends, and the Church to continue their generous support that Sewanee may be strong and ready for the part she is to have in America's post-war educational program.

Mrs. W. A. Guerry Dies at Her Home in Charleston

Mrs. William Alexander Guerry died at her home in Charleston, South Carolina, on June 6. Few people have had the long, varied, and intimate connection with Sewanee that Mrs. Guerry had. For many years, when her husband was Chaplain of the University, she lived at Sewanee. Later when he became Bishop of South Carolina and she lived away from Sewanee, she had during all those years her summer home at Sewanee. She saw her sons and her grandsons educated at Sewanee. She saw one son, the Rev. Moultrie Guerry, follow in his father's footsteps as Chaplain of the University. She saw another son become the present Vice-Chancellor of the University.

Mrs. Guerry had not been in good health for many years and her death was not entirely unexpected. The Mountain joins Sewanee people everywhere in extending to the Vice-Chancellor and to the Guerry family loving sympathy.

On the day of Mrs. Guerry's death, Commencement Sunday, Sewanee gathered at All Saints' to witness the unveiling of a tablet to her husband, the late Rt. Rev. William Alexander Guerry. The tablet, gift of friends and alumni, was presented by the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhon, Bishop of Florida, and was received by the Vice-Chancellor. Mrs. Guerry knew of the tablet and had seen the inscription which records, along with biographical data, Bishop Guerry's part in the building of All Saints' Chapel:

On the Mountain

Naval Trainees Live on Strenuous Schedule

"Early to bed and early to rise" is the order of life for a majority of the students of the University enrolled in the Navy program. Bugles sound and sailors hit the deck. They march to meals and drill on Monday afternoon. Within very narrow "bounds"—a radius of one mile from Naval Headquarters at the Sewanee Inn—the sailor confines his activities during the week. Only on the week-ends from Saturday after lunch to Sunday evening at 2200 o'clock, is "liberty" granted, which represents a radius of fifteen miles from the same center. Week-end "leaves" are granted only by special permission.

The daily routine of the Naval trainees looks little like that of the old grad who will read these columns:

STUDENT CLUBS TAKE PLACE OF FRATERNITIES

To fill in student life the place of fraternities which have been suspended until the war is over, five student clubs have been organized under the auspices of the University. The Naval students have been grouped by dormitories while civilian students form a separate group. Officers have been elected and meetings are held regularly on Tuesday evenings. Payment of dues of $2.00 per month entitles the student to make use of any of the club houses, the fraternity houses having been assigned as clubs to the various groups as follows:

- S.A.E. to Hoffman
- P.D.T. to Cannon
- A.T.O. to Johnson
- P.G.D. to Sewanee Inn
- S.N. to civilian students

The clubs have not, to be sure, the moving power of the old fraternities and they do not excite the same loyalties and rivalries. They fill, however, a very necessary place as recreation centers and will grow in their usefulness. One function that has been delegated to the clubs is that of the old German Club. Dances are given under the auspices of the five clubs, the presidents of the clubs constituting the Executive Committee.

First Dance of the Season Counted a Great Success

The first formal dances since Commencement were held on the week-end of September 11 and, by common consent, were in every respect up to the high standard of Sewanee dances through the years. The new club, under whose auspices the dances were given, represents the five student clubs, a former Sewaneean, Mac Gray, being its president. In the shoes of Faculty Adviser Griswold, now Chaplain in the Navy, was none other than the highly esteemed Professor of Spanish, Senor W. W. Lewis. The gym was effectively decorated, the motif being, as might be expected, naval. Francis Craig and his orchestra from Nashville provided the music. Conspicuous, of course, was the Naval uniform in which most of those present were dressed. The civilian students, however, and the receiving line preserved the tradition of evening dress.

Sewanee Mourns Death Of Mrs. Rowland Hale

It was with deep regret that Sewanee heard of the sudden death on July 25 of Mrs. Rowland Hale, 75, daughter of the late Gen. and Mrs. Edmund Kirby-Smith.

Known affectionately to her countless friends as "Miss Lydia," she had presided for almost a quarter of a century over the old family home, Powhatan Hall, which was a favorite stopping place of alumni and other visitors. Those who were privileged to know her will always remember her dignity, graciousness, human warmth, and keen sense of humor. One of the chief factors in the creation of a distinct and unique atmosphere at Sewanee has been the quiet but pervasive influence of certain remarkable women of high breeding, strong character, and colorful personality. Another beloved link with the past has gone.

Miss Winifred Kirkland, Author, Dies at Sewanee

Miss Winifred Kirkland, 70, nationally known author of children's books and religious works, died May 13 at Sewanee, where she had lived for many years. She was the sister of Professor R. M. Kirkland of the Theological School.

Born in Pennsylvania, she was educated at Vassar and Bryn Mawr and taught English at Miss Shipley's School and Baldwin School, both in Bryn Mawr.

Since 1908 she had devoted her time to writing. Among her many books are Chaos and a Creed, Star in the East, The Man Who Gave us Christmas, The Continuing Easter, and Are We Immortal? She was also a regular contributor to such magazines as The Atlantic Monthly and The Living Church.

Death of Henry Hoskins Recalls Old Sewanee

Henry Hoskins, Sewanee's hackman of the gay nineties and nineteen-hundreds, died on September 14. His passing meant little to the modern Sewanee who had known him for years only as the ice-man, little realizing that, as he went quietly and faithfully about his prosaic business, he could tell, if he would, many a tale of romance, of never-to-be-forgotten Germans, of moonlight rides, and of happy days of auld lang syne. Henry's hacks are a thing of the past, superseded by the taxi and the private car. The days of Henry's glory are all but forgotten. But to many a returning alumnus, Henry was a link with the golden past and no visit was complete without an hour of reminiscence with Henry.

SEWANEE TIGERS AGAIN TAKE TO THE GRIDIRON

Much interest was aroused throughout the South when the Athletic Board of Control announced the following program for the football season of 1943:

"Civilian students and naval trainees will be eligible to take part in an intramural competition in which two teams will be organized to play a schedule of three games.

"Upon the completion of this intramural program a picked team will play three intercollegiate games, provided, of course, that these outside games can be arranged.

"The Rev. George Hall (assistant coach for the past two years) has been appointed head coach and will be in charge of the whole program. One of the intramural teams will be coached by Mr. Hall, the other by Mr. Harris Moore."

Football practice is well under way and from all indications the season should be a good one. There are no ex-college stars of first magnitude among the Naval trainees, but Coach Hall permits himself to be quoted as saying: "The material is good, the best I have ever seen at Sewanee with the exception perhaps of my freshman year, 1931." At this date, the schedule has not been completed.

Under the direction of Harris C. Moore, Athletic Director, there has been and will be intramural competition in other sports besides football. During the softball season, which is just over, the teams took their names from ships. Two outside games were played. The all-star team played Camp Forrest and lost. The winning Shipjacks played the winning V-12 team at Howard College and won.

Great interest has been shown in both the golf and tennis tournaments, which have just been completed. During the winter volley ball and basketball will take the spotlight followed in the spring by track for which sport there appears to be some outstanding material.

of the Carnegie Corporation of New York City, to whom in his citation for the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law the Vice-Chancellor most appropriately referred as "a patron of learning, an able executive, true friend of Southern education, and steadfast champion of the liberal arts idea of education."

A striking feature of Commencement exercises has always been the high standard of performance of the two representatives of the graduating class. Particularly impressive again this year were the Valedictorian, Mr. David Collins of Hot Springs, Arkansas, and the Salutatorian, Mr. Grenville Seibels of Columbia, South Carolina.

versity, I hereby install you as members of the honor council of the University of the South for 1943-44 and I commission you to serve in this high office, charging you—and all your comrades also—with the responsibility of maintaining effectively the honor system in this university and of preserving on this campus in every act and relationship the ideals of honor, integrity, and trustworthiness to the glory of our nation and to the glory of God. In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti."

Before them in the chancel was the American flag and above them hung the Confederate battle flag both symbolic of that gallantry, loyalty and devotion to duty and to truth which should be characteristic of a naval or an army officer. Before them also was the cross upon the altar symbolic of the dignity of life, the sacredness of human personality and the great spiritual values for the preservation of which the United States has gone to war.

Before the election of members to the honor council the honor code pledge was signed by almost all the naval trainees at Sewanee at the invitation of a naval trainee honor code committee.

After installation of the honor council Dr. George M. Baker, dean of the college, addressed the naval trainees and the civilian students.

"By adopting the code," Dr. Baker said in part, "you have rendered possible the preservation of perhaps the most valuable of our time-honored traditions; have infinitely strengthened the honor system and assured the maintenance of the code for the time when we return to a civilian basis in the postwar period.

"If the war continues until you see active service, the time will come when physical courage may fail you and your chief reliance will be upon the moral and spiritual courage with which you have equipped your soul. It may seem to you to be a far cry from the scrupulous observance of rules of ethical conduct on the Sewanee campus to acts of daring and bravery on the high seas. However, letters which I receive almost daily from Sewanee men in the service bear eloquent testimony to the value of Sewanee's emphasis upon moral and spiritual truths as a source of inspiration and courage to her sons.

"We have seen operating here, to be sure in miniature, the principles which lie at the very heart of the democratic way of life. These qualities implicit in the honor code are self-reliance, personal dignity and individual responsibility.

"The Anglo-Saxon tradition of freedom is also our heritage, and we shall endure as a nation only as long as we build our national life on the firm foundation of personal character and responsibility, and trustworthiness in our dealings one with another. It is because the adoption of the honor code by the Sewanee V-12 unit, the procedure followed in its inauguration and in the election of the honor council, are in keeping with the best Anglo-Saxon traditions as exemplified in our American democratic way of life, that I am convinced that this formal installation of the honor council is a significant moment not only in the life of the university, but also in the life of the nation. What you have done and what we are doing here today will reach out beyond the confines of this campus and will have an enduring influence not only upon yourselves, but upon the lives of all the men with whom you come in contact both in the navy and later in civilian life."

Opening Service in All Saints' Chapel

*Eternal Father, strong to save,
Whose arm hath bound the restless
wave,
Who bidst the mighty ocean deep
Its own appointed limits keep
O hear us when we pray to Thee
For those in peril on the sea.*

Faintly in the distance the chimes of Breslin Tower marked the quarter hours.

The opening service was conducted by the Rev. George Hall, chaplain of the University.

In the austere gothic chapel named All Saints' in memory of the lives of the men who built Sewanee, its walls covered with memorials to distinguished alumni and faculty members and over the north and south aisles the state flags of the states whose Episcopal dioceses control the University, Dr. Guerry welcomed the navy students to its classrooms and its high traditions.

"It is our desire and determination," said the Vice-Chancellor, "to have here the best naval training unit in America and to send the Navy the finest officers that will walk the deck of any ship. I salute, therefore, the future admirals of our fleet, as fine a group of young men as are on any campus."

Dr. Guerry expressed a hope that "there will be a most cordial relationship between the naval trainees and the civilian students."

"I ask," he said, "for a unity in the comradeship within this university. Many of you come from other institutions and I would want you to continue your allegiance to your own classmates and your former college, which you could not regard more highly than I do. I ask for unity here because unity in comradeship is a necessary factor of unity in effort. The task before us is to win the war, to defeat our enemies, to vanquish the forces of cruelty and darkness and to bring about a lasting peace. Only a nation united for this purpose can achieve this goal."

"I ask," Dr. Guerry continued "for a common pride in scholarship, a genuine interest in learning, a high regard for intellectual attainment.

"An academic tradition of the finest sort becomes your heritage on this campus. . . . For 75 years the University of the South has sought to be a Christian university of high merit, embracing especially three concepts of education: Religion in education, the liberal arts ideal of education, and education as an individual process. Whatsoever things are good in this university, whatsoever things are worthwhile, whatsoever things are noble are due in large part to our striving over the years to achieve this goal and to realize these ideals. Out of this striving has come our traditions and our way of life as well as our ideals."

Of the war and the part he expected the University to take, Dr. Guerry said: "We understand the issues at stake, we are fully aware of the necessity of adjustments and changes to meet war conditions," but added:

"On the other hand, within the framework of the war program, we do wish to preserve our ideals, our traditions, and our way of life. Only in this way can we preserve our soul, our individuality, our personality as a university. . . . If under the impact of war and a new program we forsake that which has been the essence of our faith and being, if Sewanee loses her own individuality, we can give you little beside the credits for the courses you will pass.

"And we want to give you more than that. We want to seek to bring to you a deeper love of truth and goodness and beauty, a deeper passion for liberty and justice, a deeper understanding of the precious values in life and a greater courage and fortitude to fight fearlessly in this world war to its very end, and long after the war is over, that these things may be saved for mankind."

At the conclusion of his address Dr. Guerry presented Lt. Alexander, commanding the Naval unit, who expressed a hope that the unit would adopt for its own a pledge credited to a soldier in the present war, who wrote:

I will work, I will save, I will sacrifice and endure. I will fight cheerfully and do all within my power, as if this whole struggle depended upon me alone.

The first and last verses of America were then sung and the governor was introduced by Dr. Guerry.

Declaring that the university today becomes "a second Annapolis," Gov. Cooper congratulated the navy unit on the "character and tradition of the school to which you have been assigned."

"You will," he said, "prepare for war amid mountain scenes of scholarship, historic background, and culture.

At the conclusion of Gov. Cooper's address the choir and audience sang the University "Alma Mater" followed by the Sewanee Hymn, written by the late Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, as a recessional.

The pictures here displayed were taken at the opening of the University on July 1, 1900. The scene was even more colorful than the one shown to the trainees, after a review by the General. The recruits were seen in their new uniforms as students under the Navy's

JOSEPH BREVARD JONES, '88, K.A., tax attorney for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad in the State of Alabama, has come to be recognized as an authority on tax matters and is often called into consultation as an expert, as a result of his long experience. In December, 1940, he was given by his company an award for fifty years of continuous service. He resides at 419 Cloverdale Road, Montgomery, Ala.

A glance at the records reveals the fact that Mr. Jones was a distinguished classical student at Sewanee, having received the Kentucky Medal for Greek in 1886 and the Master's Medal for Latin in 1887. He was graduated from the University in 1888 with the degree of Master of Arts.

WALTER BARNWELL, '91, S.A.E., died at his home in Plandome, Long Island, on July 30. His life was devoted to a long and continuous teaching career which dates from his graduation at Sewanee. In 1891, he became an instructor in mathematics at Trinity School, New York. After serving in a similar capacity for a time at Columbia University, he taught for five years, 1902 to 1907, at the De Witt Clinton High School. In 1907, he became head of the mathematics department of the Flushing High School which post he held until his retirement in 1938.

Mr. Barnwell lived in Sewanee with his family from 1881 to 1891. He was one of the early members of the S.A.E. fraternity.

RICHARD W. FRANKLIN, '01, A.T.O., died August 21 in Belvidere, Ill. He had been in a serious condition for a week as the result of a fall experienced while on a visit to relatives in Marenngo, a suburb of Chicago. He was buried in Houston, his home. He spent two years at Sewanee, '97-'99, being later graduated from the academic and law departments of the University of Texas. He had been prominent in Houston for over forty years as a lawyer and as a citizen and was active in the political affairs of the State. He was a member of Christ Church, Houston, and a leader in the affairs of the diocese of Texas. Sewanee loses in the death of Richard Franklin a prominent alumnus and a very loyal friend who answered generously at all times the call of his Alma Mater.

TANDY A. BRYSON, '09, died late in August at his farm at Eagle Mills, near Troy, N. Y. A native of Gallatin, Tenn., he was a graduate of the grammar school and a student in the University for one year, '05-'06. From Sewanee, he entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Shortly after graduation in 1910, he began a notable career as an inventor, in the course of which he patented over sixty mechanical improvements in centrifugal separation, safety devices of various sorts, electrical control and similar improvements of common but cumbersome machinery. For the past several years, he had been engaged in war work and was cited in July by the Ordnance Department of the United States Army for distinguished service. Tandy Bry-son's career is all the more remarkable because of the fact that he became crippled some years ago. In spite of the pain which he suffered constantly, he continued to work, moving from place to place in a gasoline-driven chair.

ATLEE H. HOFF, '07, chairman of the Morgan County National Bank, Decatur, Ala., member of the Board of Trustees from the Diocese of Alabama, and local chairman in Decatur for the campaign for the Living Endowment, is the father of two graduates of recent years from the University. Lt. Atlee H. Hoff, Jr., '36, served from February to June, 1942, in the Army. He was then commissioned in the Navy and sent for training to the Naval Air Station at Quonset Point, Rhode Island. He was recently made a full lieutenant and is now on active duty with the Navy. Louis G. Hoff, '38, is doing defense work with the Monsanto Chemical Co., in Texas City, Texas.

REV. SAMUEL SUTCLIFFE, '12, D.T.D., died suddenly of a heart attack on August 13 at his summer home at East Hampton, Conn. At the time of his death he was rector of St. Mark's Church, New Britain, Conn., which he had served with distinction since 1918—his entire ministry with the exception of the first few years spent in the missionary district of Puerto Rico under Sewanee's Bishop Charles Colmore. During his long ministry in New Britain, Mr. Sutcliffe became an outstanding citizen and a high ranking member of the Masonic Order. He was very active in diocesan affairs, being Archdeacon of Hartford, and a member of the Standing Committee and the Executive Council at the time of his death.

HARDING WOODALL, '17, S.A.E., former president of the Associated Alumni, has been elected a vice-president of Harriman, Ripley and Company, 63 Wall Street, New York, with which company he has been associated since

Cecil Woods Heads Bond Campaign in Tennessee

State Chairman for the sale of war bonds in Tennessee in the Third War Loan Drive is Sewanee's Cecil Woods, '21, of Chattanooga. Because of his distinguished leadership as city chairman in the Second War Loan Drive, in which Chattanooga ranked at the top in its class, Mr. Woods was called upon by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to assume the very responsible position of State Chairman. President of the Volunteer State Life Insurance Company of Chattanooga, he has behind him a long record of achievement in the insurance business, first as State Agent, 1922-37, for the Bankers Life Company and later as Manager, 1937-39, of the Real Estate and Mortgage Loan Department of the National Life and Accident Insurance Company of Nashville. During his five years of residence in Chattanooga, he has been an outstanding citizen, prominent in civic affairs and in all matters concerned with the general welfare of his community. Mr. Woods is a member of the S.A.E. fraternity.

1935. The News takes pleasure in extending to "Judge" Woodall, loyal alumnus and never failing friend of the University, congratulations and all good wishes.

MALCOLM FOOSHEE, '18, K.S., writes in a recent letter that he became on June 1 a partner in the law firm of Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lombard. Fooshee, alumnus of Sewanee, Harvard Law School, and Oxford University, has had a distinguished career in the legal profession in New York City. The News takes pleasure in publishing to his many Sewanee friends his new connection.

PHILIP G. DAVIDSON, JR., '22, has been appointed dean of the Senior College and Graduate School of Vanderbilt University. Davidson, a student in the University in 1918-'19, took his B.S. degree at the University of Mississippi and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago. At the time of his appointment to the deanship at Vanderbilt he was Professor of History at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga. He is the author of Propaganda and the American Revolution, published in 1941, and a new book, The Eighteenth Century South, will appear shortly. Beside these publications, he has contributed numerous articles to various historical reviews.

DANIEL HEYWARD HAMILTON, '26, K.A., is the Assistant Attorney General of the State of Maryland. He studied law at the University of Maryland and after graduation from that institution in 1929 he practiced law in Baltimore. His father, the late Daniel H. Hamilton, was an alumnus of the class of 1892 and served from 1923 to 1929 as president of the Associated Alumni. His brother, Adgate Duer Hamilton, was a member of the class of 1929.

THE REV. THOMAS H. WRIGHT, D.D., '26, S.N., became rector on September 15 of St. Mark's Church, San Antonio. San Antonio has always been a strong Sewanee center and satisfaction at Sewanee is general that an alumnus should fill this very important parish. He succeeds the Rt. Rev. Everett H. Jones, D.D., the new Bishop of West Texas, Sewanee's Commencement preacher of his year, himself an honorary alumnus and a staunch friend of the University. Tom Wright's career in the Church has been a distinguished one. From 1934 to 1941, he served as rector of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Church at Lexington, Va., where Washington and Lee regarded him so highly that he was given in 1940 the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. From 1941 to the present he was Dean of St. Mary's Cathedral, San Francisco. A loyal member of his Sewanee fraternity, he serves as Grand Chaplain of the Sigma Nu fraternity.

WILLIAM C. SCHOOLFIELD, '29, P.D.T., has recently been made head of the Aerodynamics Department of the Vought-Sikorsky Company of Stratford, Conn. Billy Schoolfield, star football and track athlete at Sewanee and a member of the Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa fraternities, after graduation went to M.I.T. to study aviation engineering, and was graduated from that institution in 1932. His rise in his profession has been steady until now he has the very responsible position of department head in a company that builds the Navy's fastest and best fighters. He was married in August, 1942, to Miss Barbara Mitchell Siegrist of Garden City, Long Island.

REV. EARL R. DICUS, '36, P.D.T., has recently moved from the diocese of Arizona to Batesville, Ark., where he serves as rector of St. Paul's Church. He joins many other Sewanee clergy in that diocese which is moving rapidly forward under the efficient administration of its Sewanee bishop, the Rt. Rev. R. Bland Mitchell.

DR. DANIEL ROGER GRAY, '38, D.T.D., was married on January 16 to Miss Ellanor Gaither Frierson of Columbia, Tenn. Gray, honor man and valedictorian of his class, entered Harvard Medical School after leaving Sewanee and received his M.D. degree from that institution. He is at present living in Boston, serving a surgical internship at the Children's Hospital in that city.

ALEXANDER DUBOSE (SANDY) JUHAN, '40, P.D.T., was ordained by his father, the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, D.D., '11, to the diaconate on January 24. Sandy, after leaving Sewanee, took his theological course at Virginia Seminary. He is now living at Norton, Va., in the diocese of Southwestern Virginia whose bishop is the Rt. Rev. Henry D. Phillips, '04. He will be married on September 25 to Miss Alice Kent Bryan of Falls Church, Va. The bride-to-be is a cousin of Dr. B. F. Finney, Vice-Chancellor Emeritus of the University.

JOHN R. ENOCHS, '41, K.A., is the proud father of a son, John Romily Enochs, III, born on September 5. John is connected with a business firm in his home town, Wilson, Ark., none too happy because of the failure of his repeated efforts to be accepted in some branch of the service. Mrs. Enochs was before her marriage, Miss Nancy Priscilla Wiselogle of Memphis.

BOOKS BY SEWANEE ALUMNI

Clerical Errors. Louis Tucker. Harper, 1943.

Though without artistic form, this is one of the most readable and revealing of recent autobiographies. The author, a member of the Class of 1892, and a retired clergyman, has served in many parishes, big and little, both in the North and the South. This long experience with all sorts and conditions of people, combined with his intelligence, keen observation, and never-failing sense of humor, has given him an unusually wide and profound knowledge of human nature in both its strength and its weakness. If one were to point out the book's salient quality in two words, "broad humanity" would be as satisfactory as any others. Furthermore the book is plentifully spiced with wit, playful malice, strong prejudices, and racy anecdotes. Like his contemporary, the Rev. Wm. E. Cox, he enjoys relating the pranks he indulged in while at Sewanee.

Southern Sidelights: A Record of Personal Experience (1942) by the Rev. Wm. E. Cox, '02, is a brief informal autobiography chiefly valuable for its detailed account of economic life on a small plantation in eastern North Carolina just after the Civil War. The grinding poverty of Reconstruction forced the author to leave school at the age of fourteen in order to operate the plantation and support his family. Because, however, of the indomitable energy and determination of his remarkable grandmother he was enabled to enter a preparatory school at twenty-two and the State University at twenty-five, working his way through both institutions. At twenty-nine he entered the Theological Department at Sewanee, where he remained three years. He was, to use his own words, most deeply influenced by the "personality," "spirituality," and "unpretentious simplicity" of three men: Dr. W. P. DuBose, the Rev. Wm. Haskell DuBose, and the Rev. Wm. A. Guerry. He also affords us a vivid glimpse of his fellow theolog, Walter Mitchell, now Bishop of Arizona. No Sewanee man will dispute the truth of the following: "Every college has its college spirit, and there is a 'Sewanee Spirit,' but beyond this there is a deeper something I love to think of as 'the soul' of Sewanee—something breathed into it by its great souled founders, deepened and enriched by the struggles and the sacrifices of all those who have made Sewanee what it is." (p. 125)

In The Democratic Tradition in America (Ginn & Co., 1943), Col. Clayton E. Wheat, '04, for many years Professor of English at West Point, has brought together a well-chosen group of selections from literature, mostly in prose and mostly by Americans. His purpose is to illustrate our national development and distinctive ideals from the seventeenth century to the twentieth. Besides the canonical things from Franklin, Washington, Jefferson, Henry, Hamilton, Paine, Webster, Clay, Monroe, Lincoln, Wilson, and the two Roosevelts, he has included pertinent passages from such creative writers as Emerson, Thoreau, Mark Twain, Thomas Wolfe, and S. V. Benét; from such historians and scholars as Lerds Bryce and Acton, Parrington, Turner, Brooks, Mumford, and Lippmann. The final section of the book looks to the future and gives the views of Whitehead, J. Huxley, Thomas Mann, and Henry Wallace. Among the poets, English and American, Whitman is given the most generous representation.

Sewanee Men in Uniform

We publish below additions to the lists hitherto published of Sewanee men in uniform, the number now being about 1,100. Thanks to tireless efforts on the part of the staff of the Alumni Office, to the coöperation of professors, students, and residents of the Mountaintop, to the parents and alumni who have been good enough to respond to our many requests for information, there is being compiled in the Alumni Office a record of the war activities of Sewanee alumni that will be invaluable for the future. Once more we repeat our request for information to all who read these columns and call attention to the form printed on page 12 of this issue.

SEWANEE'S GOLD STARS

Sgt. GEORGE CLEVELAND WILLIAMS, '2 K.A., died August 2, at Arcadia, Calif. as the result of injuries received in an accident, details of which are unknown. At the time of his death he was serving as an instructor in the ordnance training division. Before entering the army, Cleveland Williams was a freelance writer living at Lubbock, Texas, having been earlier for nine years a prominent feature writer for the Associated Press residing in Seattle, Wash. He was the son of a Sewanee alumnus, the late Rev. Luther G. F. Williams, '01. A member of the class of 1925, he was a student in the University for two years, 1921-1923.

Lt. CLAYTON EARL WHEAT, '37, A.T.O. was killed in an airplane accident when his plane crashed in the Alabama River near Maxwell Field, Ala., on January 11, 1943.

Lt. Wheat, a native of Ft. Thomas, Ky., was a student in the University for two years, 1933-35. He began his pre-flight training at Maxwell Field in January, 1942, had his primary training at Decatur, Ala., and his advanced training at Columbus, Miss. He received his wings at Columbus in December, 1942. Later in the same month he was ordered to report to Maxwell Field for further flying instruction prior to becoming an instructor.

Details of the accident which took the life of Lt. Wheat are lacking except that for heroism in the attempt to rescue him from his partially submerged plane an officer in the Air Corps and two soldiers on duty in a crash truck were awarded the Soldier's Medal.

Lt. Wheat was a nephew of Col. C. E. Wheat, '04, formerly Chaplain at West Point and now Professor of English there. He is well remembered at Sewanee where the news of his death came as a great shock to his many friends on the Faculty and in the community.

Lt. ALDEN T. MANN, '41, P.D.T., died in a German hospital on May 22 of this year, according to news received by his family through the International Red Cross. The news that he was missing after his Flying Fortress was shot down in a raid on Wilhelmshaven on May 15 was followed later by the news of his death.

Alden Mann, of Birmingham and Atlanta, was a graduate of the Sewanee Military Academy and was a student in the University for two years, 1937-39. He enlisted in December, 1941 and received his wings in July, 1942. He was promoted to the grade of First Lieutenant in December, 1942 and was assigned as first pilot on a Flying Fortress. Lt. Mann had taken part in numerous raids over Germany and on one occasion brought back his badly riddled Fortress with five of his crew wounded. He had been recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Sewanee, profoundly regretful of the loss of this distinguished young alumnus, extends to his family deepest sympathy.

LT. CHARLES M. ARMSTRONG, '44, P.D.T., was killed in an airplane accident Wednesday, August 4, at Bradley Field, Conn. Details of the accident which cost the life of this young Sewanee airman are lacking except that it was the result of a collision.

Charles Armstrong, a native Texan, held a reserve commission in the Army as a result of his graduation from Texas Military Institute in San Antonio. He left Sewanee at the end of his sophomore year to enter the Army. He later transferred to the Air Corps and completed his advanced training at Mission Field, receiving his wings in May, 1943. A fighter pilot, he was operating one of the new Thunderbolt planes at the time of his death.

The news of Charles Armstrong's death came as a great shock to his many friends still at Sewanee, and it will be received with genuine regret by his contemporaries serving far and wide in the armed forces of the country.

MISSING IN ACTION

LT. GANTT BOSWELL, '43, D.T.D., according to news received recently in Sewanee, has been reported officially as "missing following action in the performance of his duty and in the service of his country."

A native of New Orleans, Gantt Boswell was a student in the University for two years, leaving at the end of his sophomore year to enter the Naval Air Corps. He received his training at Pensacola and Miami and was later stationed at San Diego. Details as to his station at the time he was lost are withheld for military reasons but according to a letter received from one of his Sewanee friends in March, 1943 he was serving somewhere in the wide area of the Pacific.

Gantt's brother, writing to Prof. W. W. Lewis, adds to the news this so characteristic Sewanee touch: "He loved you and all about the University as a student should." Sewanee loves her many sons and regrets profoundly to hear this news of Gantt Boswell.

SAMUEL MANN BUSSEY, '43, is reported as "missing in action" after the fall of Java in the Spring of 1942. This information comes from the Alumnus of Vanderbilt, which University he attended before he came to Sewanee. He was serving in the Field Artillery of the United States Army.

DECORATIONS

CAPT. ALEX GUERRY, '39, S.A.E., received in quick succession the Air Medal and Distinguished Flying Cross for meritorious service in aerial operations in the Southwest Pacific area, where for the past fifteen months he has served as an army pilot in the combat zones surrounding New Guinea.

The Air Medal was awarded early in May, for more than 25 operational flight missions over territory that was continually patrolled by enemy fighter aircraft and in which heavy anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

The army citation in regard to the Distinguished Flying Cross reads in part as follows: "Lt. Guerry departed on the first photographic reconnaissance mission ever attempted over the Panapai airdrome at Kavieng, New Ireland. On the previous day, regular reconnaissance flights over this base had been discontinued because of intense fighter activity in this area. Although the distance involved was considered to be the maximum range for this type aircraft, Lt. Guerry photographed the airdrome and then flew off his course to obtain pictures of Simpson Harbor and Rapopo strip in the Rabaul area. Lt. Guerry completed the mission despite encountering unfavorable flying weather. The entire flight entailed flying over open sea and performing manifold duties of piloting, navigating, radio operating and obtaining pictures. This officer's willingness to serve beyond the call of duty and the resourcefulness he demonstrated in completing the mission are worthy of the highest commendation."

Lt. Guerry was recently promoted to the rank of Captain. On September 5, he piloted Associated Press foreign staff writer Vern Haugland in a B-17 to observe the landing of Allied paratroopers in Markham Valley, east of Lae, New Guinea. His was the first plane over the valley where he remained for four hours, observing that spectacular operation.

CAPT. JAMES VANCE GILLESPIE, '41, P.D.T., is perhaps Sewanee's most decorated soldier to date in the current war. It was reported in the last issue of the News that he had received the Air Medal for distinguished service. To this has been added the Oak Leaf Cluster for bombing the port of Calabria, Italy, and the Distinguished Flying Cross for 200 operational hours. He also wears the pre-Pearl Harbor and Mediterranean area service ribbons and has been decorated with the Order of the Purple Heart.

Capt. Gillespie was wounded on May 25 while on a bombing flight over Messina. His condition was so serious that he was given seven blood transfusions. After two months spent first in a British hospital in Malta and later in a base hospital in Cairo, he was moved to Miami. After a visit to his family in San Antonio, he will report for duty in Miami on October 13. Capt. Gillespie's many friends on the Mountain entertain the hope that his next assignment will bring him by Sewanee.

LT. JAMES M. HAYES, '43, of the North African Air Force Troop Carrier Command, has been awarded the Air Medal for meritorious achievement over Sicily. Lt. Hayes enlisted in the Army Air Corps in October, 1941 and received his wings in May, 1942. He was a student in the University for only one year, 1939-40. Alumni of the early thirties will remember his uncle, J. Floyd Hayes, '35, who played on Sewanee's football team for several years and died suddenly in 1936, shortly after leaving the University.

LT. JOHN P. BRYANT, '43, S.A.E., joins the number of Sewanee airmen who have been decorated with the Air Medal, received for "meritorious service in aerial flight on numerous operational missions over enemy occupied territory." Lt. Bryant serves with a Thunderbolt Squadron of the Army Air Forces in England and according to information received earlier this summer is now a first lieutenant.

More Sewanee Meetings In Far-Away Places

A letter from Lt. J. Walker Coleman, Jr., USNR, on duty somewhere in the Pacific tells the theme of this article. He writes Dr. Guerry as follows:

"I ran into Bob Macon and Dick McCauley several days ago, and we had dinner together one night. Of course we spent all the time together talking about Sewanee. I remember hearing a story once before going to Sewanee to the effect that no matter where a Sewanee man is he can find another Sewanee man there. We talked about this and agreed that we had found it to be true. Since I have been in the Navy, I have met someone from Sewanee in almost every place I have been. Bob Macon said that he went into a restaurant several weeks ago and ran into four Sewanee men in an hour."

From far-away England, Lt. Col. Robert P. Hare of the Army Air Forces verifies Walker Coleman's experience. He writes Major Gass as follows:

"Just the other day I had the occasion to chat with Brigadier General Haywood S. Hansell who commands the wing under which we operate. During the course of the conversation it developed that he graduated from the Academy about the year Quintard burned. No doubt similar conversations have developed in other parts of the world."

Dan Scarborough seems to be ubiquitous. Dick Kirchhoffer writes from the Pacific:

"Sewanee people pop up in the far distant parts. Walker Coleman, John Adair, Fluffy Lawson, Dan Scarborough (several times) have all been seen."

Arch Bishop in a letter that sounds very homesick for the Mountain writes:

"I am in the Pacific area as you can see by the return address. Saw Joe Atkins at Church on Easter Sunday and we ate together a couple of times. Also took him flying one day. Also have seen Dan Scarborough. He is just the same as when I knew him at Sewanee. I spent a day with him on his ship and had him over to fly a time or two."

Lt. Peter Phillips in a letter to his father records the following rather remarkable meeting with his brother, Lt. (jg) Tom Phillips:

"As I took my ship out the other day I saw Tom's ship approaching port; so I sent the following message by flashing lights:

From the Commanding Officer, PC— To Lt. (jg) Tom Phillips. Welcome home. Pete. O.K."

The News will be glad to pass on to its readers in each issue the tales of such meetings of alumni. There must be many of these and their news value is immense. So, we invite you to tell us of your encounters.

COL. PAUL R. E. SHEPPARD, '08, K.A., is stationed at the Ordnance Depot at Savanna, Ill., where he is post surgeon and commanding officer of the hospital. A graduate of the Medical Department of the University, he entered the army in 1917 and served overseas in World War I. His twenty-six years in the Medical Corps included a detail in the Philippines which terminated in 1940. Notice of his promotion to the rank of Colonel was received in the Alumni Office in August of this year.

BRIGADIER GENERAL DABNEY OTEY ELLIOTT, '12, A.T.O., has the important assignment of chief engineer of the Allied staff. Born at Sewanee, he was a student in the University for one year, 1908-09. He was graduated from West Point in 1914, ranking eighth in his class and was assigned to the Engineers. His name suggests his very intimate connection with Sewanee. He is a great grandson of Bishop Stephen Elliott, one of the founders, and a great nephew of Bishop James Hervey Otey, another of the founders. His promotion to the rank of Brigadier General dates from the early summer.

BRIGADIER GENERAL JAMES C. CROCKETT, '12, K.A., outstanding American authority on the organization and equipment of the German Army and former assistant military attache at Berlin, was assigned on May 27, to the general staff of the United States Army's European headquarters. The assignment, made immediately after the Roosevelt-Churchill conference, was considered at the time by many news commentators as a definite step forward in Allied preparation for an invasion of Europe. Subsequent events seem clearly to have borne out their expectations in this regard.

LT. COL. JOHN C. BENNETT, JR., '18, D.T.D., has recently been made commanding officer of the Army Air Base at Grenada, Miss. Col. Bennett served as First Lieutenant with the Air Forces in World War I and was officially credited with bringing down two enemy planes in combat in four months' active service in France. He was decorated by General Pershing for meritorious and conspicuous service. President of the Louisville, Ky., Flying Service at the outbreak of the war, he was ordered June 15, 1941, to report for active duty with the Third Air Force at Tampa. Col. Bennett, a frequent visitor to the Mountain, has many friends here who were deeply grieved to learn of the death in an airplane accident of his son, J. C. Bennett, III, an Ensign in the Naval Air Corps.

BEN WASSON, '21, enlisted as a seaman after Pearl Harbor and later was assigned to duty on the Carrier Hornet. According to information received he survived the sinking of that vessel. A native of Greenville, Miss., he was a student in the University during the war years, 1917-'19, enrolled in the old S. A. T. C.

MAJOR J. D. PATTON, '32

LT. WILLIAM BYROM DICKENS, '29, P.K.P., is stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va. The tale of his war record begins when, a teacher of English at the University of Michigan, he was drafted into the army in June, 1942. He was first assigned to the Air Force, serving in the Special Service section at Jefferson Barracks and later as a weather observer and forecaster at Gowen Field. He then received an appointment to the Engineer O. C. S. at Fort Belvoir. Commissioned in February, he was assigned to Staff and Faculty, Publications, in which capacity his job is "to help edit the innumerable manuals and training publications which seem necessary in the modern army," while he pines for active field service.

LT. COL. ROBERT P. HARE, III, '32, P.D. T., is now serving with the Army Air Corps somewhere in England. In a recent article entitled "Four Quaker City Colonels Establish Fine Records With Troops Abroad," and published in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the Baptist Temple in Philadelphia and president of the International Christian Endeavor Society, who was, at the time the article was written, on a tour of army camps in the European war area, wrote as follows concerning Colonel Hare:

"I found the Colonel with his immediate superior at one of the wings of the Eighth Air Force Bomber Command. He was an anxious, busy man.

"When we read of seven bombers or one not returning from a 'mission,' it means to Robert Hare not ships, but men—ten men to every ship, and to him and his associates a strike in a factory producing Flying Fortresses is an incredible thing—they can't believe it."

LT. (JG) WILLIAM HASKELL DuBOSE, '32, A.T.O., received his commission in the Navy in February, 1943. He had been for several years engaged in the insurance business in San Diego, Cal. After completing his course of indoctrination at Fort Schuyler, he was assigned to duty in Boston. Transferred to Savannah, he spent a brief leave at his home in Sewanee during the Commencement season. Lt. DuBose is the son of the late Dr. William Haskell DuBose, for years professor in the Theological School, and grandson of Dr. William Porcher DuBose, Sewanee's eminent scholar and theologian.

MAJOR JAY DEE PATTON, '32, A.T.O. is stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas. That his friends may know of his activities of the past several years, the NEWS prints such information as it has received from time to time. The Baltimore Sun records the fact that in July 1941 Sewanee's All-Southern griddler was assistant to the director of sports for the 13,500 soldiers at Fort Eustis. In March, 1942, Patton himself states that he is at Fort Riley at the U. S. Army Field Printing Plant wishing "I were back at good old Sewanee." In September, 1942, he is again authority for the news that he is Captain in the Cavalry at Fort Riley. At the end of July, he writes the office on stationery bearing the letterhead "Jay D. Patton, Major, Cavalry, Staff and Faculty, The Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kansas." He includes in this last letter what he calls "a reasonable facsimile of my likeness" which appears on this page.

CAPT. HUGH T. SHELTON, JR., '37, S.A.E., was married on June 25 to Miss Ann Anderson Roess of Jacksonville, Fla. Captain Shelton's rise in the Army Air Corps has been rapid. He enlisted in July, 1941; in February, 1942, he received his wings; in November of the same year he was promoted to the grade of First Lieutenant; in April, 1942, he was made Captain. In July he was stationed at Brooksville, Fla.

MAJOR HERBERT E. (BIDDY) SMITH, JR., '36, P.D.T., was a reserve officer and was ordered to active duty early in 1941, as a Second Lieutenant, Ordnance Department. After about a year of service he was promoted to the grade of First Lieutenant and six months later to the grade of Captain. His varied experience has been in both a technical and an administrative capacity and, at one time or another he has had most of the staff jobs. He is now a Major and was serving somewhere in North Africa as late as August. His many friends in Sewanee hear frequently from him and in one of his letters there is the nostalgic note: "I think I would cheerfully swap everything I have seen for the Mountain Top. I often think of those cool green summers when I am trying to get the dust out of my teeth." In another he is thinking of the day when he and others will "be coming back to plague the Mountain with reminiscences when (his is all over.)"

SIDNEY H. YOUNG, '36, A.T.O., completed his training at the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School, Camp Barkeley, Texas, and was commissioned second lieutenant on March 24. According to a news release from Camp Barkeley, he was a corporal at the time he entered Officer Candidate School, being chosen for his qualities of leadership, intelligence, and initiative. Since leaving Sewanee, Lt.

Young, a native Mississippian, has been living in Los Angeles, and was a public liability adjuster in civilian life.

LT. HENRY LUMPKIN, '36, S.A.E., is an officer on the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Spencer. Readers of Life will recall the issue of June 7 in which were published the account and the pictures of the dramatic engagement between the Spencer and an Axis submarine. The Spencer, on convoy duty in the North Atlantic when the submarine was sighted, engaged and sank it. Henry Lumpkin was aboard the Spencer during the engagement and was also in the lifeboat sent out from the Spencer to pick up the survivors. Also in the service is Henry Lumpkin's brother, Lt. W. W. Lumpkin, '34, who is a Chaplain in the Navy.

THEODORE DUBOSE RAVENEL, '37, S.A.E., received his commission as a Second Lieutenant in the U. S. Marine Corps last July. It was more than ordinary patriotism and desire to serve his country that led this young alumnus of Sewanee to enlist in the Marine Corps, to endure the rigorous boot training at Parris Island, and finally to earn his commission at Quantico. He has five brothers-in-law in the service and the urge to join them was more than he could resist. Furthermore, his father, Theodore DuBose Ravenel, was one of the first Sewanee casualties in World War I. He set aside, therefore, claims of home and family and entered the service of his country at war.

Lt. Ravenel, of Columbia, was a student in the University for two years, 1933-35. His wife, the former Mary Virginia Cravens of Sewanee, and their three small sons will live in Sewanee until the war is over.

LT. LEONARD L. SHERTZER, Jr., '39, K.S., was graduated on September 15 from the Naval Air Station, lighter-than-air base, Lakehurst, N. J. He had previously earned his commission in the Naval Reserve on October 28, 1940. Designated as a Naval airship aviator, he was assigned to a blimp squadron for anti-submarine patrol duty over coastal waters. As far as is known in the Alumni Office, Lt. Shertzer and Lt. Edward Mahl are the only Sewanee alumni in the lighter-than-air service.

LT. (JG) WILLIAM M. GIVEN, '39, P.D.T., and Ens. Helen Vivian Milam of Jacksonville, Fla., were married at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Jacksonville on September 12.

CAPT. ROBERT D. KUEHNLE, '40, K.S., has been on active duty with the Army Air Corps in the Southwest Pacific area since January, 1942. He was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in September of last year, and to the rank of captain on July 1.

BRUCE M. KUEHNLE, '42, K.S., was graduated as fighter pilot on January 14. He was sent to Maxwell Field, Ala., for a special course preparatory to assuming duties as a basic instructor. He was married on January 19 to Miss Julia Harned Benoist.

Both Robert and Bruce are sons of the Rev. Joseph Kuehnle of Natchez, Miss.

LT. THOMAS STANLEY JONES, '40, P.D.T., Decatur, Ala., has recently been promoted to the grade of First Lieutenant and is stationed at Selman Field, Monroe, La., where he is flight commander and instructor in the advanced navigation school. Lt. Jones visited Sewanee in June of last year, accompanied by his bride, the former Miss Mary Evelyn Sturgis of Atlanta.

NAVAL AVIATION CADET JOSEPH D. EZECHEL, '45, S.N., of Ramsey, N. J., was transferred in June to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola after successful completion of the primary flight training at Squantum, Mass. Cadet Ezechel, like many other young Sewanee aviators, first tried his wings in the C. P. T. program at the University.

Five Alumni Receive Commissions at Pensacola

Five late releases from "The Annapolis of the Air," the U. S. Naval Air Training Center, Pensacola, Fla., record the fact that five young Sewanee airmen have won their "Wings of Gold" and received their commissions as Second Lieutenants.

Lt. Willie Joe Shaw, '44, S.A.E., of Birmingham, Ala., was a student in the University for two years, leaving at the end of his sophomore year to enter the Navy. He was a member of the varsity football team. He is in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Lt. Harry Cato Cage, '44, P.G.D. of Gallatin, Tenn., after two years in the University, felt the call of the service and entered the Navy. He is likewise a member of the Marine Corps Reserve.

Lt. Thomas Alfred Sams, '42, S.A.E., of Macon, Ga., left the University in the course of his senior year to enter the Navy. He was the mainstay of Sewanee's fine golf team for several years. He, too, chose the Marines.

Lt. Paul Edward Davidson, '43, P.D.T., of Birmingham, Ala., likewise answered the call of the Navy in his Senior year and likewise preferred the Marines.

Ensign Minter Young Aldridge, Jr., '44, P.D.T., of Greenwood, Miss., spent a year at Georgia Tech and then transferred to Sewanee. The call of the air took him from the Mountain in the midst of his Junior year. He is a member of the U. S. Naval Reserve.

Purple Continues Publication

The NEWS heartily commends to the alumni the war-time version of the Sewanee Purple, the first number of which appeared on September 23 and was received with general acclaim by the Mountain. In its ten pages it presents a fine assortment of Sewanee news and pictures of the Navy in action on the Mountain. For the duration of the V-12 program, the Purple will be the joint enterprise of civilian students and Naval trainees who will share in its publication and management and will sit together on the College Publications Board.

For the convenience of the alumni who wish to keep up from week to week through the Purple with this most interesting chapter in the history of the University we print herewith a subscription blank. A copy of the first issue is being sent to alumni in the armed forces.
